'River of Fire' Forces 20,000 to Flee

EDMONTON (CP) — What started out as a crack in a natural gas pipeline sent sewer workers scrambling away from a "river of fire" Friday night and forced the evacuation of almost 20,000 persons from the city's newest subdivision.

Early today explosive propane and butane gases had been flushed out of one sewer and workers were about to flush out another system.

A 22-year-old truck driver caught in the explosion was listed in critical condition this morning in hospital.

As the truck drove past, the gas ignited and flames blew 100 metres into the noon-day sky.

Fifteen minutes after the first explosion and nearly two kilometres away, Nick Hendrey looked up in surprise at a sudden glare lighting the main shaft of a new sewer.

"There was this river of fire at the bottom of the shaft," said Hendrey, a 32-year-old construction foreman. "It was a solid sheet of fire. All of a sudden it went 'whoosh.' It really got bright down there."

Hendrey and his three men scrambled out through a manhole cover they had passed the day before. Twenty-four hours earlier and they would have had nowhere to run.

As it was, one of the men panicked and ran past the escape hatch. "We had to pull him back," said Hendrey. "It was scary."

Two more minor explosions followed.

An analysis of the gas presented more problems. The cracked pipe had carried propane, butane and condensate Friday. The heavier gases were sinking to lower levels, but the condensate was drifting up through the sewers to street level, and there was danger they might drift up into basements and ignite.

Fearing the spread of gas into storm sewers and possibly sanitary sewers, city officials decided by mid-afternoon to evacuate about 3,000 residents in Mill Woods.

By the end of the day, the evacuation spread to an area 28 blocks by 41 blocks.

The main leak occurred in Edmonton's Mill Woods southern subdivision, with a second leak forcing the evacuation of about 1,000 residents five kilometres west in another district.

Pipelines serving local refineries cross the subdivision. As many as 14 run down one utility corridor.

Work crews at the rupture site clawed through frozen dirt to get at the pipeline and cap it.

Some residents refused to leave their homes. An official said they could not be forced out unless the Alberta's disaster law was invoked.

Others had not heard about the evacuation. At dusk, their southbound cars choked neighborhood access roads while overhead, black smoke streamed north across the city.

By nightfall Mill Woods was a ghost town, Streets eerily empty, drapes drawn, all lights off, it was as if everyone had gone inside to hide.

Police cruised the area, ensuring everyone who wanted to leave had left. Drivers who didn't have identification and an excuse like having to pick up the family pet were being turned back at checkpoints.

Food Piles Greet Refugees

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For four terrifying days 35-year-old Thich Chau, his delicately attractive wife Ai Lien Huynh, 29, and son Luong, 11, were crammed with 413 other people in a leaky old 38-foot boat as it was battered by storms on the South China Sea.

Conditions aboard were indescribable. By the fourth day, their drinking water had run out and it seemed the waterlogged boat was close to foundering.

The Chaus thought they would drown within hours unless by some miracle they were rescued.

They were, by a U.S. Navy ship en route to Hong Kong.

And on Friday the well-dressed, smiling Chaus showed no sign of their ordeal as they eagerly moved their few possessions into comfortable temporary quarters at the rectory of the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church in Saanich.

With one other person, 35-year-old Tai Tran Hon, the family are the first of the South Vietnamese small-boat refugees to arrive in Victoria.

They have been "adopted" by the parish and one of the first things they were shown Friday afternoon was a gigantic quantity of food piled against the wall behind the altar of the church.

Cans, bags and packets of every description — from familiar rice to such unfamiliar items as plum pudding, kippers and homemade blackberry jam — the food with an estimated value of $10,000 has been gathered for the refugees by the church youth group through weekly visits to homes throughout Greater Victoria.

The Chaus and Hon, who had not met until their arrival in Victoria a few days ago, both lived in or near the South Vietnamese capital, Saigon.

Hon was an interpreter attached to the U.S. military from 1965 until his discharge from the South Vietnamese army in 1970, when he ran a grocery shop and jewelry store.

Chau had a small business selling used car parts, while his wife made baskets and other handcrafts.

From the time the U.S. forces pulled out in 1975, they resolved to escape because, as Hon put it simply, "we hated the Communists."

Speaking to the Times reporter through interpreter Kwong Ming Lam, who came to Canada from Hong Kong 13 years ago, Chau said he was determined to flee Vietnam — despite the knowledge that many refugees had

China Ready To Pull Out Of Vietnam

United Press International

China, its troops in virtual control of the strategic provincial capital of Lang Son, has decided to halt its advance and withdraw, a Japanese report from Peking said today.

The Kyodo News Service said Chinese authorities disclosed the decision to pull out of Vietnam, but that the date for the cease-fire and troop withdrawal has not been set.

Military sources in Tokyo said today Chinese troops captured a hill overlooking Lang Son Friday morning and that Vietnamese forces had abandoned the city, turning it into a "ghost town." They said it was not immediately known if the Chinese would advance further to seize the city.

Sources in Bangkok quoted intelligence reports saying Vietnam has begun an emergency airlift using U.S. built C-130 transports to rush at least one division of regulars totalling from 2,000 - 9,000 men from South Vietnam to the defence of Hanoi.

The reports said the Chinese have surrounded Lang Son but it was not clear whether troops south of the town overran it or simply bypassed it.

"The Chinese obviously wanted to take Lang Son very badly and the Vietnamese obviously tried very hard to stop them," one Western diplomatic source said. "It looks like a clear victory for the Chinese."

The sources said it was still not clear whether the Chinese had actually occupied the shell-battered town which once had about 40,000 inhabitants.

"There is fighting two miles south of Lang Son on the road to Hanoi," one source said, but added, "We have seen nothing yet that indicates the Chinese are going to push much past that."

Kyodo quoted Chinese authorities as saying the cease-fire and pullout decision was made by the Chinese Communist Party Central Military Commission.

The authorities said there will be a halt of all military operations by Chinese forces deployed inside Vietnam and a withdrawal of all personnel to Chinese territory.

The Vietnamese earlier today said their forces had beaten back a three-day assault on Lang Son by nearly 50,000 Chinese troops and tanks in the major battle of the 15-day-old war. Japanese dispatches from Washington, meanwhile, quoted government and defence department officials as saying Chinese troops had captured Lang Son, about 90 miles north of Hanoi.

Kyodo said, however, that a spokesman for the Vietnamese embassy in Peking denied the reports today that Lang Son had fallen.

Price Agency Vote 'Gimmick'

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with mounting pressure over inflation, the government has created yet another inflation-monitoring agency — the fifth in 10 years.

The new National Commission on Inflation — which will have powers to demand provision of information but will not be able to roll back or defer increases — was quickly labelled a pre-election gimmick by opposition critics.

"The government decided it's got to have some type of body at election time to point to when voters ask what they are doing about inflation," said Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, said in Thunder Bay, Ont., that the commission was "at best, a weak response from an uncommitted government."

The NDP has been pressing the government almost daily over increases in corporate profits and rising prices, particularly food prices which rose more than 14 per cent in the last year.

Earlier this week, Broadbent had proposed creation of a commission that had powers to roll back excessive price increases.

"I don't claim this board is going to wave inflation away," Finance Minister Jean Chretien said in announcing the new agency.

He said the commission will rely on "general persuasion, discussion and arm twisting" to persuade business and labor to restrain wage and price increases.

The new commission replaces the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity (CSIP) which was set up last year as an arm of the Economic Council of Canada as an inflation watchdog.

Firebombing No. 17: Police Nab Suspects

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two young men were taken into police custody early this morning after firebombers threw a Molotov cocktail through the front window of a city bank, the 17th firebombing incident in Greater Vancouver in the past 10 weeks.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch at 14th and Main St. was attacked shortly after midnight when a rock was thrown through the window followed by a bottle — but the wick fell out and there was no damage.

Two men were later picked up after a witness gave police the licence number and description of a vehicle involved. They were not charged, but a vehicle was impounded.

A recent rash of bombings has been directed mainly against banks and government offices in Vancouver. This morning's target had also been attacked early Wednesday, causing some damage and closing it temporarily.

Earlier Friday, a crude incendiary device was thrown through a window of the Gleneagles elementary school, but did little damage. Police blamed it on youths prompted by the publicity given other firebombings.

After the attempted firebombing at Gleneagles school, a police spokesman said a couple of boys were seen running away.

"They broke a window and threw in a glass bottle with a little petroleum in it. It was very amateurish.

Teacher in Fear after Drug Incident

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto area high school teacher says he has lived in fear since he interfered in a drug deal among a group of students.

He said he has been pushed through a plate glass window, hurled down a flight of stairs, had his tires slashed and his family threatened.

The incidents happened more than a year ago, but he said he is so afraid of further attacks that he would talk about his troubles only if he and his school were not identified.

The attacks were not isolated incidents but were symptomatic of growing violence in the schools, he said.

"There's definitely a problem of violence in the schools, and in spite of what the school boards say it's not just happening in North York." North York is a city in Metropolitan Toronto.

A North York board of education report on violence in schools, made public Thursday, said secondary and junior high schools are on the threshhold of increasing violence with 32 reported cases of assault on teachers in three months last year.

The report said school officials must start long-term planning to avoid having to place policemen in the corridors, buy emergency signal systems or to train teachers to join riot squads.

The high school teacher said that after he tried to interfere in the drug deal among the students in his school, he became the target of a string of minor physical assaults and verbal abuse, which finally culminated in his being pushed through a plate glass window.

A student was charged with assault but was given a conditional discharge by the judge.

The teacher said that he found his tires slashed 30 minutes after the student was given the discharge.

And the following week, another student pushed him down the stairs.

Then his wife was told by a telephone caller that the family "would be taken care of."

After that the teacher said he started walking his children to school and using adult babysitters.

But he said he wasn't the only teacher who ran into problems.

"There was a group of teachers being victimized. I know of teachers at other schools who are afraid to walk the halls alone."

He said he still teaches at the school because he's a good teacher, and because he can do more by staying than by running away.

Although he hasn't been attacked in the past year, he said the school staff are more aware of potential trouble and keep a closer eye on things.

"I thought I was the last person it would happen to. I get along very well with the kids.

"There seems to be a certain amount of respectability to violence these days. There's a violent minority who are more brazen because they can get away with it."

Teachers have to be fair but tough, he said.

Dog Packs Terrorize Islet

BOWEN ISLAND (CP) — RCMP officers are investigating complaints that packs of dogs have made this Howe Sound Island off West Vancouver unsafe for children, the elderly and other dogs.

Sergeant Russ Copeland of Vancouver RCMP, which is responsible for policing the island, said Friday that an officer has been on Bowen for two days investigating the problem, including a reported attack of man in his 20s by three large dogs last week.

Bert Elliot, Bowen Island's representative on the Greater Vancouver Regional District (GVRD), said Thursday three large dogs dragged the man off his feet.

Elliot said the man was able to repel the dogs with a stick. Although the only damage was ruined clothing and a damaged briefcase, "it would have been tragic if it had been a child of a woman," he said.

Elderly persons and women now are afraid to walk along deserted roads and parents are escorting their children to protect them from dogs, Elliot said.

He said the 10 to 20 dogs involved have frightened so many people that area residents are afraid to go out at night.

He said the GVRD and island residents have asked for provincial government help in drafting a bylaw which would provide a means of controlling the animals. The government has also been asked for funds to pay for the control.

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said his organization can do nothing until the bylaw is passed.

Copeland said there is nothing yet to indicate the problem is uncontrolled.

"We have had few complaints from residents about dogs," he said.

However, if the investigation reveals the problem is serious, RCMP would enlist the SPCA to capture the animals and dispose of them.

He said the RCMP faces a problem in identifying wild dogs from domestic animals on the loose. Police are hoping the GVRD will quickly appoint a liaison to consult with RCMP and assist them in the investigation, Copeland said.

Trains Catch Fire

LONDON (AP) — Travellers fled from the platform of London's Victoria railway station late Thursday while firmen battled a blaze that began in an arriving train and spread to a second train next to it. British Rail said the area was closed for two hours because of the outbreak.

Vietnam Refugees Get Warm City Welcome

drowned in the attempt and that those captured escaping were made to serve three-month prison terms.

"They say it was hard living in Saigon if you were Chinese and in business," said the interpreter.

"The Communists would take all your possessions. The reason they wanted to escape was for freedom; they believe in freedom."

But for both Hon and the Chau family it took 10 separate, frustrating attempts before they finally made their getaway: Hon in October last year, the Chaus three months earlier.

Some boats were confiscated before any escape bid was possible. At other times they were swindled out of their passage money by unscrupulous boat owners. And yet other getaways were foiled by coast guard vessels while the refugees were still in inland waters.

Hon said with three friends he successively owned four boats, including a fairly seaworthy craft of about 200 tons, but each time their escape hopes were dashed.

His final attempt was made with 17 other people in what was virtually a dinghy, less than 16 feet long, equipped only with a sail.

A storm came close to swamping them during their 20 days at sea, and they suffered extreme hardship until they were picked up by a Hong Kong-based fishing boat.

Within days of arriving in Hong Kong, he learned he had been accepted as an immigrant to Canada. The Chaus heard the good news just before Christmas.

A Sacred Heart church spokesman said the refugees were interested to learn that Victoria is the "daffodil capital" of Canada, and are willing to earn some money as daffodil pickers over the next few weeks.

After that Hon, who speaks English fairly fluently, says he's prepared to tackle anything. "Any kind of job except as a waiter," he added with a grin.

One of the first things he wants to do is re-establish contact with his nine brothers and sisters, who had all fled South Vietnam earlier. Some are in Malaysia, he believes, but he has no idea where the others might be.

The Chaus said they are delighted to be in Canada.

Copter Hijacking Suspect Nabbed

MONTREAL — Rory Shane, 28, sought in connection with a helicopter hijacking and bank robbery here last week, was arrested Friday night after a series of police raids. Police said Shane was in the company of a woman when they found him. Shane escaped from the medium-security Leclerc Institution Dec. 14 while on a day pass, after serving eight years of a 20-year sentence for shooting two policemen in Victoria, in September, 1970. On Feb. 24, a man and a woman rented a helicopter here, then forced the pilot to fly them to a shopping centre where the man robbed a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada of $12,000. After the holdup, the pair forced the pilot to fly them to a nearby subway station where they escaped.

LOS ANGELES — Producer Norman Lear, who created such hits as All in the Family and One Day at a Time, is being sued for $750,000 for allegedly stealing an idea for a television show. Marilyn Sokol, an actress and writer, charged in a superior court lawsuit filed Friday that she sent Lear a six-page treatment of a project idea called Nanette of the North in November 1977. In January 1978, she said, Lear said he was not interested. However, he allegedly turned the project over to CBS, which will be producing it in the form of On Ice, her suit claims.

PRINCETON, N.J. — Leading scientists from around the world are gathering this weekend in Princeton to celebrate of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Albert Einstein, whose ideas and theories launched the Atomic Age. More than 250 scholars, including Nobel prize-winners, will participate in five days of activities at Princeton's Institute for Advanced Studies.

CHICAGO — Police are looking for a red-white-and-blue taxi with a middle-aged driver and possibly a negotiable cashier's cheque for $4,585,909.58 in the back seat. Jean McEniff, 22, a messenger for an investment firm, told police she accidentally left the cheque, which she was to hand deliver, in the cab Friday. The cheque in theory could be cashed by whoever found it, police said. "But if someone's interested in cashing it, they'd almost have to go to a Swiss bank, because no local bank teller has that kind of cash handy," said Charles Bliss, president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank.

WARSAW — Poland announced Friday, after long and secret negotiations, that Pope John Paul will travel to his native country in June, becoming the first pontiff to visit a Communist country.

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — The late Bing Crosby's estate is worth at least $6 million and possibly much more, inheritance tax documents show. Much of Crosby's wealth, however, will not be made public. He left the bulk of his estate to his second wife Kathryn and his seven children, in a living trust that is not subject to disclosure.

HONG KONG — Prince Charles flew into Hong Kong today on his first official visit to this booming British colony at the tip of south China. The 30-year-old prince, wearing a blue suit, was greeted by Sir Murray Maclehose, Hong Kong's governor, and other officials and dignitaries.

WINNIPEG — Walter Barnick, 47, of Oyama, is the sole winner of a $1 million dollars in the most recent Provincial Lottery draw, the Western Canada Lottery Foundation announced Friday. Another $1 million-winner is a group of nine employees at Heron Cable in Waterloo, Ont.

PHILADELPHIA — A siamese twin who survived a six-hour operation that separated her from her sister, with whom she had shared the same heart, has started breathing on her own. The baby was listed in critical, but stable condition today at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children, where a team of 17 doctors performed the separation Thursday. But nursing supervisor Charles Morris said the infant is doing extremely well considering the severity of the operation.

PM, Carter Meeting

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau flew to Washington today for a two-hour working luncheon with President Carter.

Trudeau said before he left Ottawa discussions are to concentrate on energy matters, particularly the stalled Alaskan natural gas pipeline.

The $12-billion project to bring Alaskan gas through Canada to the lower 48 states already has been set back at least two years by U.S. regulatory delays.

The prime minister also will see energy secretary James Schlesinger in New York, to push him toward a U.S. decision on the pipeline.

Trudeau's office says this visit was arranged to prevent Carter possible embarrassment from visiting Canada during an expected spring general election campaign. The president is squeezing the meeting in between mediation sessions aimed at reaching a Middle East peace settlement.

Trudeau said in the Commons on Friday he would express his concern to Carter about the slow-moving pipeline project, which would mean jobs and investment for Canada if construction proceeds.

The U.S. state department says this is a private visit by Trudeau and it plans no special ceremonies for him. The prime minister flies to New York in the afternoon to attend an evening concert at Carnegie Hall.

Although there is no official agenda for today's meeting, there are a number of energy-related matters that officials expect to come up for discussion.

Carter may comment on the decision this week by Canada's regulatory agency — the National Energy Board — that Canada has additional reserves of natural gas for export to U.S. markets. The additional supplies would help relieve U.S. energy shortages resulting from the nine-week shutoff of Iranian oil exports.

COMMERCE PERSONAL LOANS.

IF YOU NEED TO BORROW FOR SOMETHING WORTHWHILE, OUR BANK CAN HELP.

READ A GOOD BOOK.

We realize that a lot of people are confused by the complexity of banking services today. Whether or not you're a Commerce customer, Our Bank has important information for you about one aspect of Commerce services, the personal loan. It's all in a free booklet available at any Commerce branch across Canada. Here's a sample of the kind of information you'll find in our booklet.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN YOU COME TO US?

The Commerce treats personal loans personally. Every Commerce Manager or Loans Officer is trained to judge eligibility for a loan on the basis of your individual situation. In order to help us decide what type of Commerce personal loan is best for you, we need to know something about you. So, we'll ask you some basic questions. Such as, how long you've lived at your present address, worked at your job, whether you rent or own your home, if you have any outstanding loans or accounts and the purpose of your loan.

DON'T DISQUALIFY YOURSELF.

We understand that a lot of people think we consider "something worthwhile" to be only an emergency item or a case of outright necessity. Not so. What we look for is your ability to manage the loan; to make the required payments while still meeting your other commitments.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR CREDIT RATING?

Relax. Don't let the idea of a credit rating unnerve you. When you apply for a Commerce personal loan, we ask your permission to check your credit rating. However, it's only a point of reference when we consider your eligibility. Certainly, a good credit rating is an asset but we make the decision to lend you the money you need after assessing every aspect of your situation.

OUR BANK CAN HELP

COLLATERAL.

Collateral is just another word for security. Almost any kind of property can be pledged as security. The more common kinds include:

Bank Accounts
Stocks or Bonds
Chattel Mortgages covering cars, boats, recreational vehicles...
Guaranteed Investment Certificates
Real Estate Mortgages and Term Deposits.

The item you have decided to buy may be used as collateral. The most important "security" on any loan is your personal commitment to repay the loan in accordance with the terms of the loan agreement.

TAKE THE TIME TO READ OUR BOOKLET.

Just about everybody has to borrow at some point in their life. It may be a loan to make home improvements, purchase a new car, take a vacation or invest in a Retirement Savings Plan or Home Ownership Savings Plan. It may be sensible to arrange a loan to consolidate a lot of small debts into one monthly payment. Whatever the nature of the loan you need, it should help to read our booklet on Commerce personal loans. Ask for a copy today.

A Forecast Gone Awry

Some important new statistical information has turned up which suggests that much of the federal government's strategy on unemployment is wrongheaded and misdirected.

Until recently, most economists accepted the federal government's assumptions about a slower-growing labor force in the next decade, about 1.5 per cent more people in the work force each year compared with an annual expansion of 3.5 per cent in the 1970s.

That assumption was based in turn on expectations about working women that have lately been exploded. Last year the finance department issued a report on labor trends in the 1980s which concluded that the work force would grow about 1.7 per cent in the first half of the decade and 1.2 per cent from 1986 to 1990. It forecast that the male participation rate (the proportion of men of working age actually working or looking for jobs) would remain about the same, and that for women would slowly rise, from 46 per cent in 1976 to 47.4 per cent in 1981 and 49.5 per cent by 1990.

The experts turned out to be very short of the mark. The rate projected for seven years down the road (48.8 per cent) was actually reached last month. It meant there were an extra 161,000 women in the labor force.

The dry statistics speak of a highly significant trend. Women are going to work in larger numbers than anticipated by economists and statisticians (and the politicians who based policies on their figurings). Accordingly, the labor shortage predicted for the 1980s may never materialize, and instead Canada will know the same high unemployment it has suffered through the 1970s. The significance of this trend can hardly be overstated. It suggests strongly that much of the government's framework of employment policies is irrelevant and not meeting real conditions.

What Canada needs are not short term public works projects, but a long term approach to finding work for the chronic surplus of labor. From the politicians, we need some fast rethinking of policies that have suddenly become outdated.

No Case for a Commission

Best of luck to Bernard Gillie, the educator chosen this week to head the Greater Victoria school board's education commission. He'll undoubtedly need it.

The board appears to have picked a good man for the job. He has wide experience in the field of education, having served as a district superintendent, as president of the B.C. Teachers Federtion, as a member of the University of Victoria senate and, most recently, as a member of the Universities Council.

But despite his credentials, Gillie has been set an impossible task. He himself summarized well the questions the school board wants him and his commission to answer: Where are we now? Where are we going? And how are we going to get there?

Those are not questions with easy answers. Gillie himself admits this when he notes that the study will take at least 18 months, even though the board hoped it would be completed in nine.

What is worse, however, is that they are probably questions that in the end, cannot be answered by a commission. Commissions sponsored by any level of government are most useful when the questions that need to be answered involve matters of fact. New facts and research undertaken by this sort of commission can be of great benefit to the politicians who must make the final policy decisions.

Commissions are much less useful when they must make value judgments — and that appears to be the case with the education commission. The populace of Victoria is not likely to reach any consensus on where its education system should be going.

Many will think it should be placing renewed emphasis on teaching children basic skills of reading, writing and arithmetic. Others will think that other skills are likely to be more important in the 21st century.

Many will think declining enrolment is an opportunity to ease the burden on the already sorely-pressed taxpayer. Others will think it is an opportunity to provide better education for the children remaining in the system.

The decisions between those sorts of options are, in the end, political decisions. They will, in the end, be made by politicians.

It seems unlikely that an 18-month commission study, even one headed by as illustrious an educator as Gillie, will do anything more than delay them.

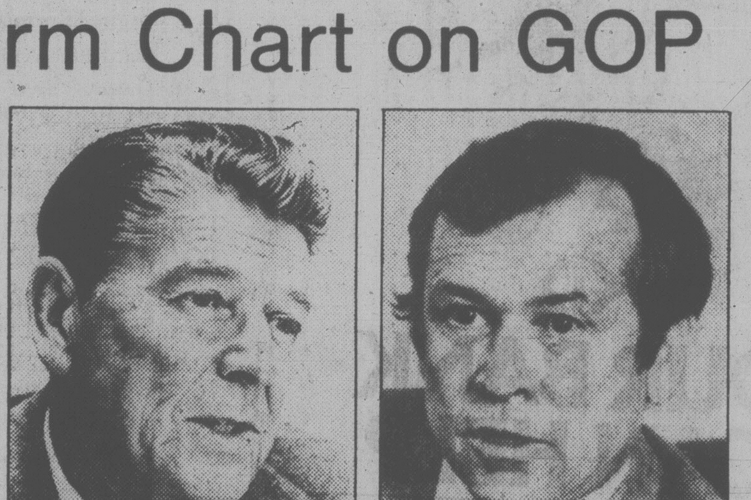
Early Form Chart on GOP



Reagan and Sen. Baker seem to be Republican frontrunners.

WASHINGTON — Since President Carter suddenly is being low-rated again by polls and politicians alike, maybe it's time for a look at the Republicans who'd like to replace him. Here's the scouting report of a knowledgeable party leader on what he refused to call the "Big Five" candidates:

Ronald Reagan. The former California governor, who nearly took the nomination away from Gerald Ford in 1976, is the acknowledged front-runner, which doesn't necessarily mean that he has the nomination locked up. But it does mean that he starts with a solid base of about 30 per cent of the potential delegates.

Front runner status and the experience of 1976 also mean that Reagan will be amply financed. His national organization and campaign staff are rated head and shoulders above any others in the party and the candidate himself, unmatched as a television performer, is one of the best personal campaigners in American politics.

Reagan's Old

But Reagan's liabilities are substantial. He would be the oldest president ever inaugurated and would be 70 years old two weeks later. Many Republicans, harking back to the Goldwater experience of 1964, question whether a candidate so forthrightly conservative can win a national election. And some of Reagan's conservative support may be siphoned off to the candidacy of Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, a younger and even more conservative aspirant.

It's not clear, moreover, whether Reagans front runner status means that a primary defeat or two would explode his chances, or whether his experience and standing in the party mean that he could more easily survive such mishaps than a lesser-know candidate.

John Connally. The former governor of Texas and secretary of the treasury may be underrated by the press because of his switch from the Democrats to the Republicans and because of his indictment in the Watergate-related milk price controversy. But one reason for his early entry is to deal with these problems as soon as possible, before the primaries begin next year.

Despite these disadvantages, moreover, he is a charismatic personal campaigner whose tough-guy style may be tailored for a post-Vietnam era in which many Americans seem to feel they are being pushed around in the world. He will be well-financed and well-managed and it may well be that the real Republican showdown will come between Connally and Reagan in the Texas primary. That may be Connally's home state but it's always been Reagan's stronghold, too; and what the effect of a third Texas candidate may be is hard to estimate.

George Bush. But is George Bush, the son of former Connecticut Sen. Prescott Bush and a businessman transplanted to Houston, really a "Texas candidate?" One of his major handicaps is that he is still seen as a "Connecticut Yankee" or "a Yalie in a vest" in a party that is heavily midwestern, western and sunbelt in its outlook.

Bush's other handicap is that he is not well-known. But as Jimmy Carter showed, an early primary victory in the age of television can turn an unknown into a household name overnight. Bush is working hard and is reported to be organizing well in New Hampshire and elsewhere, recognizing that he needs a victory in the first round of primaries if he is to survive into the later campaign.

His major asset, of course, is that as a former UN ambassador, CIA director and American representative in China, he has had more foreign affairs involvement than any other Republican candidate.

Howard Baker. As Senate Republican leader, Baker has the best chance of any of these men to demonstrate his leadership qualities — which will be challenged, for example, by the direction he takes on ratification of a strategic arms limitation treaty. He is given high marks for his performance so far, particularly in helping secure approval of last year's Panama Canal treaties.

Compromise Choice

Even though the treaties were not popular with most Republicans, Baker still is regarded as having "few negatives and no enemies" within the party. That fact and a middle-of-the-road position on most issues gives him a solid base for a campaign. He is, however, notoriously uninterested in organizational matters and has as yet no real campaign staff. He's expected to announce his candidacy and get some kind of organization underway next summer — none too soon.

Gerald Ford. The former president apparently is not planning to enter any primaries, but will be available as a compromise choice if no candidate has clinched the nomination by the time the national convention opens in Detroit, in his home state. Ford just might find that by then two or three of the four other major candidates have split the delegates — but settled nothing.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Influential Victorians? Depends on Definition

Earlier this week Victoria's weekly magazine Monday printed an article on the 10 people who were supposedly the most influential in Victoria. The list was compiled by asking a panel of politicians, business people and journalists to name their candidates.

While I was flattered to be included in the final list, the end result made it clear that "influence" is a very difficult quality to define. Almost without exception the 10 names on the magazine list were those of people relatively well-known in the community — MLAs, mayors, journalists with relatively high profiles, the president of UVic, and so on. They have, I suppose, one kind of influence — perhaps most loosely described as the ability to affect the thinking of the community on current issues.

Yet I was surprised to find that few of them would have been on my own list of most influential people in Victoria. The reason is that I look at "influence" from a different point of view, from the perspective of actually being able to influence what happens in the city, what sort of growth and development take place, what kind of place Victoria will be five, 10 or 20 years from now.

That influence, I contend, is generally exercised to only a limited degree by the high-profile people in Monday's list. It is exercised as much or more by a group of people whose names are scarcely known to many of the public. They are the people who, through their positions, land holdings (often very important indeed), or influence with the key public decision-makers, can influence the final outcome of important decisions affecting Victoria. Their influence, like any other, may be for good or ill, but it is rarely noticed by the public.

Using that loose definition, then, here is a different list of 10 influential people in Victoria. Like all such lists, it is purely subjective. Undoubtedly names have been omitted; undoubtedly influence has been overestimated in some cases, underestimated in others. The list is given in alphabetical order, and apologies are made to the weekly magazine for stealing the idea.

Sam Bawlf — Cabinet ministers have influence. In the Victoria area, Bawlf has the most influence because of his official responsibilities for the Capital Improvement District Commission. Bawlf's influence is most apparent in the Inner Harbor, the convention centre, and the Crystal Gardens, but he is interested in extending it to other apsects of downtown development.

Mel Cooper — The president of the Chamber of Commerce does not automatically have influence in the community as several past presidents will attest. Cooper does have it, partly because he owns a public affairs oriented radio station, more because he is widely respected as a reasonable, moderate and truly community-minded businessman.

Hugh Curtis — Again, cabinet ministers have influence. Curtis's control over lottery funds gives him a little extra as does his extensive background in Saanich and Capital Region politics. He knows practically everybody who matters in Greater Victoria.

Pip Holmes — Holmes is from one of Victoria's oldest and most prestigious families, now involved in the family firm of Pemberton Holmes, one of Victoria's oldest and most prestigious real estate/development/insurance firms. He's now expanding his public horizons into more general questions of downtown and economic development.

Arnie Lane — Officially, Lane is a dentist. Unofficially, he's a businessman with a finger in nearly every current contentious civic issue — the convention centre, the Crystal Garden, the Gray Line fooferah, the floatplanes-in-the-Inner-Harbor row.

Peter Pollen — Pollen's public profile has lowered since he was defeated twice in attempts for provincial and federal nominations. On the civic scene, however, he's still highly respected by businessmen, politicians and developers alike. Moreover, if he decided to attempt a political comeback at the municipal level, he'd probably find the public still respects him too.

Gordon Ralston — Ralston is the principal figure in Broadmead Farms, a development company whose major land holdings in the Saanich area can affect development in all Greater Victoria. A huge shopping centre on Broadmead's land at Royal Oak, for instance, could have a significant effect on the downtown area.

John Shields — Shields is president of the Victoria Labor Council. His influence, and the influence of his council, over labor issues in particular and sometimes political issues in general can mean the difference between whether a project works or whether it doesn't.

Brian Smith — Smith keeps a relatively low profile as mayor of Oak Bay. But he exercises influence as a partner in the prestigious law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm, as chairman of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association (a body that has much to say about the size of property tax bills and also about whether we'll have a civic strike in 1979), and as a tennis partner of Premier Bennett. Smith is widely believed to be one of the few people to whom Bennett listens on matters political.

Bob Wright — Wright's influence on Victoria council comes from his position as chairman of its most powerful committee, planning and zoning. Wright can't force council to go one way or the other on a decision, but he can — and often does — work out an agreement with a developer beforehand, then persuade council into accepting the necessary trade-offs and concessions. — B.McL.

Follow New York

Spring is coming to our fair city and the children will want to play in parks and the adults will be doing more strolling around the waterfront. What I and an awful lot of our citizens would like to know is, when is our city council going to put some teeth into our dog laws? Holland Park on Dallas Road is a disgrace because dogs from miles around are brought here to use it as a running area and a bathroom. Besides, our sidewalks in this area get pretty messy. New York did the right thing and it is about time Victoria did the same. Beside, some one might make some money manufacturing and selling pooper-scoopers. — H. E. Hamilton, 605-450 Dallas Road.

Offer Your Services

A letter in the Times Feb. 20 (Blood Donors) rather caused me some ire because I know, having been a volunteer telephone canvasser for a time, that the Red Cross does have lists of blood donors and lists of volunteer canvassers. However, from experience, I can tell her that many of the donors when phoned give many reasons why they cannot give blood.

Also, many of these donors are now past the age of being able to donate, or have moved away and have not informed the Red Cross, or have moved and not given their new address or telephone number. Some of the donors have been university students, God bless them, who have given while they attended university but after completing their courses have moved away to some other part of the country.

Maybe if this lady has a telephone and has the time, she would contact the blood donor service of the Red Cross and offer herself as a volunteer telephoner. I am certain they would be very pleased and grateful to her. — Mrs. Thos. Riding, Victoria.

It's funny that the rulers of Hollywood, once so contemptuous of writers when they had many good ones, are now scrabbling around to find someone — anyone — who can put one idea, leave alone one word, behind another.

If you have a single good idea to help an imagination-starved Hollywood mogul, go west. With a little luck and push you might soon find yourself like film star Martha Dodd in Scott Fitzgerald's story, "up to your ass in daisies".

I returned to California the other day and made some notes on a scene that one might expect to have changed dramatically during the last 10 years.

Beverly Hills. The warmth, the tropical greeness still alert one for parakeets, cicadas, even tom-toms. The approach to one of the most satisfactory hotels in the world has hardly changed.

The same noble avenue of gleaming palms leads you to the same tricky crossing of Sunset Boulevard. Up the same short curving driveway, through shrubs and tailored grass, to where the blond, young giant in shirt-sleeves takes your keys and parks your rented convertible among the Rolls and Lincoln Continentals. The pink pillars of the Beverly Hills Hotel still announce "Bien venidos amigos".

People in sports shirts, tartan pants, white shoes, come and go, hailing the doorman by his first name. Sunlight, shirt sleeves; arms, faces and cleavages so improbably tanned that you wonder if everyone is wearing make-up.

The muzak plays Close Encounters and Flying Down to Rio and a loudspeaker summons an invisible John Travolta to the telephone. The smog has gone. "You can see forever today," a waiter says chirpily, dispensing towels. "As far as Catalina Island."

I was last in Beverly Hills in 1968: a time of all sorts of anxiety. The film colony seemed doomed. I remember Jules Stein, the dapper multi-millionaire boss of Universal Studios, among his own English furniture and pictures in the mansion high above Beverly Hills: "TV will be the death of the movies."

The Baby Moguls

Sam Goldwyn, the dean of studio heads, made his famous joke. "Who wants to go out to see a bad movie when they can stay at home and see a bad one free on TV?"

December 1978: 10 years later. In Universal's Madison Avenue panelled offices in New York, the same Jules Stein, 80 and still dapper, happily admitted that films are again big business. Universal had, in fact, just put out The Wiz, a black version of the Wizard of Oz that cost a record $35 million. In the current jargon, moviemaking is a "go-project"; moviemakers are "laid-back" (i.e. relaxed) again.

Still, many would say that those 10 years have shaken Hollywood like a terrier shaking a rat. Newspapers chitter excitedly about radical change in the control and pattern of moviemaking.

In New York, someone handed me an article from Rupert Murdoch's magazine New West. A headline said: "Hollywood's New Power Elite: The Baby Moguls."

The writer had discovered a zippy, new generation of "big bugs" — studio executives, directors, producers and agents — "young, well-educated, many from radical backgrounds". They shared the common cultural experience of growing up in the 1960s. They had been, apparently, protesters of the New Left in that anti-war decade.

To get a fix on this radical film revolution I first bearded a friendly guru: Ken Tynan. Tynan has been engaged on a series of long, insightful New Yorker magazine profiles of show-business giants and lives in a sometimes smog-bound bungalow off Sunset Boulevard.

I asked him if radicals are making a better Hollywood? "Well, we're back to the days of wine and grosses. But you really don't have to be a radical 1960s anti-war marcher to make quality, socially-aware movie.

"Remember Grapes of Wrath. John Ford, the director, was right-wing, but just got on with it. Hollywood studios in 1979 no longer have pools of 200 marvellous stars to choose from, or the old minor gangsters and comics like Edward Everett Horton and Eric Blore."

Tynan's wife Kathy came in, hair wet from the small pool: "Let's think of a memorable Hollywood movie in the last year," Ken says. Kathy says, Chinatown? "Four years ago." Godfather? "Five years old." We rack our brains some more. "An Ingmar Bergman film . . .?" "That's Swedish, for Christ's sake, not Hollywood." We give up. No really memorable films? That doesn't say much for the baby moguls.

Later I walk past a guard ("What is your wish, friend?") into the Universal Studios' tower that soars like a shining black mackintosh above the San Fernando Valley. I want to ask Lew Wasserman, the successor to Jules Stein and at 65 a still-active old movie czar, about the baby moguls.

He is tall, slim, has longish grey hair, thick specs, and the warm smile of a genial college president. He says, "What baby moguls? Irving Thalberg (Universal's "boy-wonder" of the thirties) was 21 as head of production. Jules Stein took me in when I was 23. But, yes, movie-makers should be younger. Movie-goers are young. Ned Tanen's the man to see."

So on to Ned Tanen, 48, in charge of Universal films, a sharp movie-maker.

Tanen is forthright: "There's nothing new in the movie business." He is pleasant, highly strung, shrewd. "It's about making money like any other business. I can't think of anything we want to make less than radical movies. Social significance almost killed off French and Italian films."

(I remembered one of Sam Goldwyn's precepts: "If you want to send a message, hire Western Union!")

Tanen, thank heaven, is unlike the hideously brash young executives in other American industries who delight in their "upward mobility". They have hard eyes and slick blazers with brass buttons and blow-dried hair. They are obsessed with Numero Uno.

A new jargon, however, is common to all today's American executives. "Laid-back", of course, means "cool"; "the bottom-line" means "the final outcome" (of a deal); people no longer confer, they "take a meeting". If you are a "super-achiever" you take meetings as often as you take your status-packed Glenlivet-on-the-rocks: regularly and with brio.

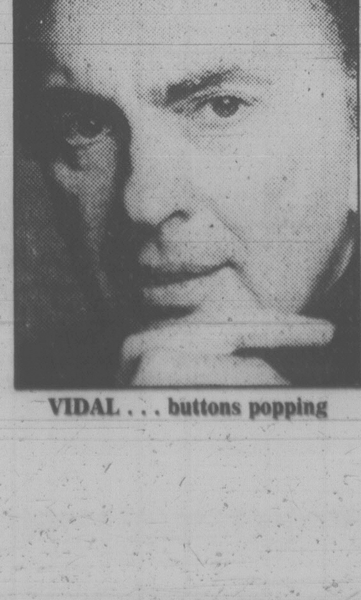
The rat who tells you you're strictly "off the wall" means you're a nutcase. It's wise to "make nice" and show that you really have "white sugar in your veins", i.e. are sensitive. If not, you may find yourself "going down the tubes".

In Super-Achiever Land, even saying goodbye is an esoteric ritual. Try it. Raise an outward-turned palm to breast-height; twitch up one corner of your mouth about the width of a fingernail; bend your eyebrows into a half-pained, half-quizzical posture — and let drop one word, as cool and expressionless as a sea-pebble: "Enjoy!" Just "Enjoy!" Then turn on your two-inch heel and amble away.

'Doing Cocaine'

Who, after 10 years of Vietnam and inflation, actually lives in Beverly Hills? New West claims that the "baby moguls", although earning big chunks of coin, live in glamorless apartments in old West Hollywood or out towards the coast in Santa Monica demurely drinking Perrier and "doing some cocaine". Relentlessly, they read scripts and swap addresses of the latest "funky Mexican restaurants". It sounds worthy. Even . . . shatteringly dull.

So is Beverly Hills dead? I was offered coffee in the restrained swank of the office of Marty Trugman — "real estate super-star". A fully laid-back young man, dark-sweatered, handsome, Trugman had appeared on my TV set animatedly discussing with Beverly Hills Mayor Joseph Tilem the welcome departure of the Saudi sheikh, Mohamed al Fassi.



VIDAL . . . buttons popping

The sheikh, having paid $2,500,000 for something like a smaller Buckingham Palace, had placed a number of conspicuously nude statues in full frontal view of Sunset Boulevard and boldly accentuated their already prominent genitalia with daubings of black and green paint.

Now, as we sat lulled by soft wall-to-wall music, Trugman laughed. "The Al Fassi house you can have for $4.5 million. That reflects the fantastic demand for houses here. People think the Arabs are coming — not true. New Yorkers, Europeans, yes. But chiefly Iranians. Two Iranians working for me actually sell our property to Tehran over the phone. Iranians will pay, like, one million dollars in cash!"

Beverly Hills, I learned, is only one of LA's cities — like Culver City, Pasadena, Long Beach. Thirty-four thousand people live here, he said, mostly non-Californians. It's a tolerant place: "Al Fassi's parties were catered by Jews; his lawyers are Jewish." (Tilem is New York Jewish himself.)

'Terrible Taste'

Diminutive, perky as a budgerigar in his South Beverly Drive office, he often favors a yellow baseball cap with Tamarisk Club, Palm Springs, stitched on it, a pink shirt and green trousers. Bald and 70-ish, he looks, someone has said, like a very expensive beach toy.

Lazar's handling of Richard Nixon, Irwin Shaw, Lauren Bacall and many others, has bequeathed him a house that, as Scott Fitzgerald said, "looks built for great emotional moments" and from which you can look down like God from the pool to the Pacific Ocean.

When I ask him about "radical" movies in 1978, Lazar snaps, "Radical? No, that's bullshit. They're rather conservative. A real bore is all those remakes. I believe Tanen wants to re-do Gone With the Wind. That's in terrible taste. More than that, it's peculiar." As for the baby moguls — "Well, they've got a hell of a lot of energy. College-educations. Better manners, maybe. That's all."

But there is one aspect of Hollywood in 1979 that is different: the appalling, unprecedented scarcity of good writers. In the "bad" old days, famous writers — Faulkner, Huxley, Robert Benchley, Scott Fitzgerald — sat around Hollywood like highly paid, although much despised, battery hens. Scott Fitzgerald had to plead with a contemptuous producer, "I'm a good writer — really I am".

Irving Thalberg kept several writers working unknown to each other on the same screenplay. Recalling that time, Tynan says: "You had no liberty to write, but you got four films in a year, and although three were crap, one was probably a film to remember. Now it takes two years to even cast a film."

Tynan warned me: "Every young taxi driver here has a pile of his manuscripts on the seat beside him to show you." Any one of them could make good in the present dearth. And sure enough, the young, fat, bearded driver who conveyed me from the house of veteran director George Cukor to see former Hollywood screenwriter Gore Vidal is a vivid case in point.

Peremptorily, he sticks out his card: "T.E. Bell, Writer Extraordinaire. Possibly the Funniest Man in Finland". He roars, "You think the great Mr. Cukor would be interested in me? I want to write, you know, something like Hawaii O-Five, or something funny called, like, Taxi. Think of the weird people you meet in your taxi. Like, whatya do yourself, sir?"

Gore Vidal's house is so Chandleresque I feel I should have a pint of rye in my hip pocket. Vidal spent 10 successful years writing for Hollywood. "Quite enough, but very valuable". He has, of course, since written Myra Breckenridge — that unforgettably witty and lethally accurate book on Hollywood goings-on. Now he's here for a slimming course on a California "fat farm". As he opens the door, handsome but plump, one of his shirt buttons pings off into the blue.

I can't imagine that Vidal or anyone else would find slimming in California a great gourmet deprivation. On Hollywood food he says: "The best is at the Hamburger Hamlets. Hot dogs two feet long".

On smart Beverly Hills party food: "You only have to see, in house after house, that old familiar black waitress' face to smell that old familiar guinea hen with wild rice. Ugh". No one, apparently, has ever taught filmstars how to eat.

I returned at last to the dark, shimmering tower at Universal City. There on a high floor over the straggling, wooded Universal lot and the Sheraton Hotel, I found a genuine baby mogul, Thom Mount, 29, the only baby mogul, everyone said, to have real power. Baggy jeans, Pancho Villa moustache, dark check open shirt, warm smile. Certainly likeable. And as unlike Louis B. Mayer, Zukor and Thalbert as Tanen had been.

In that New West article Mount had been quoted: "One of the major problems here is that people who run studios have absolutely no social responsibility". Strong words. True or false? Universal had, after all, allowed Mount to make "socially aware Blue Collar and in spite of critical acclaim it had flopped.

So crusading does go on — spasmodically. Obviously plus ca change . . . obviously, too, the Tanens and Mounts are not the semi-literate cinemoguls described by Evelyn Waugh, who paid secretaries — "pseudonannies" — to feed them classical novels, the Book of the Month, anything, and, like spoiled children, shouted at intervals, "Bags I. Daddy buy that". As Swifty Lazar says, they are educated now. They really do sit up at night reading scripts first-hand. They are searching 18 hours a day for that Holy Grail of film-makers — the delicate balance between commerce and art. A search, by the way, that, years ago, was the death of the "boy genius" Irving Thalberg.

The young moguls are tied, of course, by what Thom Mount calls "the straitjacket of this business — that if you don't make money you had better leave it". As "old" mogul David O. Selznick said, "If you are primarily concerned with something called personal artistic integrity, you should get yourself a paintbrush or a typewriter".

Bronze Bust

On the other hand, public taste is more sophisticated, techniques have moved on startlingly, censorship is minimal. Today, no one can say "the only thing producers produce is relatives" — nepotism ("the son-in-law also rises") is out.

So we come back to the question that baffled the Tynans and myself — "Why have so few recent movies stormed and occupied the mind for ever?" — like the Gone With The Wind of Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh? Why should people ever be contemplating a remake of Gone With The Wind?

Leaving Thom Mount, I descend, as darkness falls, to the Universal Tower's lobby. An elderly doorman calls for a taxi for me. People stream out past Jules Stein's bronze bust. Soon the whole, huge building is empty except for me in the vast, towering lobby and the grizzled doorman at his desk.

As I pace about, waiting, the doorman puts down his newspaper. To my surprise he begins to address me like a character in Chekhov: "What's life but waiting? You're born to die, know what I mean? I retired five years ago from my business. What happened? I retire; my wife dies. Is it fair?

"I don't know the size of my own underwear. I can't boil an egg. What's a man to do? Start again at 65? So I take this Mickey Mouse job to keep from boredom. From sitting at home, see, measuring my underwear".

Pink Pillars

I sit in the cab disturbed by a vivid image of an elderly man in ill-fitting longjohns, wrestling with can after can of food . . .

The taxi passes the Goldwyn Studios where 10 years ago I arrived an hour late for lunch with the bald, 84-year-old mogul. I recall Sam Goldwyn's strange, piping friendly voice saying: "You haven't asked me what my second favorite movie was".

"What was it Mr. Goldwyn?" "I'm glad you asked that question. It was Withering Heights (sic). We had a great actor in it — Oliver somebody . . ."

Next day, on the way to the airport, I leave the pink pillars of the Beverly Hills Hotel with their farewell inscription Vaya con Dios. Presently, the tropical shrubs, the avenue of silver-stemmed palms give way to the tangled horror of the freeways.

It seems good that the Never-Neverland of Hollywood-Beverly Hills survives more or less intact. It has made history. It is — as Samuel Goldwyn once said, introducing Jackie Coogan's mother — "The goose that laid the golden egg."

My friendly taxi-driver happens to be one of the only people I've met who dislikes living in Hollywood. He has a lip strangely deformed into a near-snarl. "I'm from New York," he says. "So where's the life here? It's so quiet, all you hear is money talking. Take the women. Nowhere can you mingle. You have to get into your goddam car to go somewhere to mingle. Then the smog — it's horrendous. Pal, I'm a goddam booby to be here".

At the airport I venture a Raymond Chandler farewell. "So long," I say. "Be pure". The taxi-driver lowers his nearside window and looks up at me pleasantly. "Enjoy!" he snarls.

STRAY FEATHERS

Sunshine Starts Things Happening

There's nothing like a little sunshine to get the old spark of life burning brighter.

Take the Sunday before last, for example. After Saturday's downpour, the sun came out — and so did the people. In every conveyance conceivable, including shank's mare, we were out taking advantage of one of this winter's rare coincidences — a fine day and a holiday.

But that sun had an even more profound — but possibly not so apparent — effect on the birds around Victoria, particularly the ducks.

I first noticed it at Holland Pond, the little pond on Dallas Road at the foot of Government Street. I make pretty regular visits to Holland Pond. Mostly I just drop by to see if the pair of Eurasian Wigeon are still in residence, but now and then I stop long enough to look over the gulls that hang out there — on the off-chance that something special might be hiding among them. But that Sunday things were pretty much as they had been all winter — lots of Wigeons and Mallards and most of them in pairs. Even the pair of Eurasians was there.

As usual, when I pulled the car in to park near the pond there was a rush of birds looking for a hand-out and, again as usual, I disappointed them. But before that disappointment had had time to take effect, a dog rambled by and there was a mad scramble back to the water.

In the melee that followed, I heard that peculiar whistle I'd heard, for the first time, about this time last year. And, as last year, it was the drake Mallards that were doing the whistling. Not only that, they were doing it to a strange kind of duck-and-weave.

Despite the fact that the act took place so quickly that it had to be seen several times to put all the pieces together, I was able to sort this much out of it. It began with the drake drawing his head and neck in, until his beak touched the water, and then rearing up on his back end and throwing his head forward, at almost the same time, meanwhile uttering the peculiar whistle.

When I saw it last year, the performance seemed to be by one drake directed at a duck. This year a whole mess of drakes were at it and their main interest seemed to be each other. The ladies showed no interest at all.

The Mallards weren't the only ducks showing some interest in the wiles of spring that day. All along the water's edge, from Ogden Point to Clover Point, little courting parties of Buffleheads were boisterously buffeting one another in their efforts to sort out the pairing arrangements for the coming nuptials.

The snappy little black and white drakes could be seen, in their short courting flights, dashing wildly a few feet in the air before surfing to a stop, their bright red feet displayed prominently as they came in. There was much more to their display, but the flying dash and surfing stop were the most obvious parts.

Now and then smaller parties of another kind of black and white duck, these ones larger, could be seen in their version of the rites of spring. These were goldeneyes and, if you watched them closely for a few minutes, you could see their well-known head-throw, where the drake throws his head back until it rests between his wings with his beak pointing staight up, and then suddenly throws it forward again, at the same time lurching out of the water and uttering what can best be described as a rather impolite burp. Oh well, to each his own.

But there were ducks off Dallas Road that day that seemed to have no interest in either the weather or each other. These were also black and white, somewhat smaller than the goldeneyes, and certainly much commoner. They were scaup and, as I'd noticed so often in the past, seemed completely unconcerned about the upcoming need to get paired off and prepare for the nesting season.

Scaups do have courtship displays, displays that involve a lot of intricate aerobatics as well as some rough contact-sport on the water. But they seem to reserve their antics for another time and place. So, on Sunday, true to form, the scaup were riding off-shore in great, sleeping rafts, totally oblivious of the opportunity they were missing. Or were they just conserving their energy for when it would do the most good — later?

Cablevision Firm Eyes Anik B Link to Victoria

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria can look forward to having an earth satellite receiving station, says Premier Cablevision Ltd. of Vancouver.

Premier plans to buy several such satellite stations following the federal government's announcement earlier this week permitting cable companies to own and operate those stations.

Stuart Wallace, president of Premier, said $150,000 has been set aside for the purchase of at least two stations — one in Victoria and one in Vancouver.

"We hope to set up a microwave system involving receiving a signal from the Canadian synchronous satellite Anik B," he said.

Sukunka Gas Found

CALGARY (CP) — A natural gas discovery in the Sukunka region of northeastern British Columbia was announced Friday by BP Canada Ltd. and Ocelot Industries Ltd.

In a press release, the companies said the gas is dry and preliminary samples indicate a 17-per-cent acid-gas content.

Houston Getting Mine

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Placer Development will spend $85 million to develop a gold and silver mine this year near Houston, Mines Minister Jim Hewitt said Friday

Carpenters Go Back

KELOWNA (CP) — Union carpenters who staged a wildcat strike at a trailer manufacturer over its contracting practices have agreed Friday to return to work following a two-day hearing of the provincial labor relations board.

Details of the settlement between 525 members of local 2076 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and Vanguard Trailers Ltd. were not immediately known.

Ex-Sheriff Sues RCMP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Yvonne Arsenault of Burnaby, a former woman deputy sheriff, has filed a civil suit in the Federal Court of Canada against two Burnaby RCMP officers, alleging false imprisonment and common assault.

Love Blooms At Pen

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman held hostage after an abortive escape attempt at the British Columbia Penitentiary in January, 1978, plans to marry one of her abductors.

Sandra Meadley, 23, said Friday that she is engaged to marry convicted murderer Andy Bruce, 30, but the pair is awaiting approval from prison officials.

Meadley's mother is prisoners' rights activist Betsy Wood who, along with Gay Hoon, was cleared of charges Thursday in the same hostage incident at the century-old penitentiary in nearby New Westminster.

Bruce had his sentence extended as a result of his involvement in the incident, and now is being held in solitary confinement.

A Canadian Penitentiary Service spokesman said all prisoners seeking permission for marriage must first have their application approved by the provincial attorney-general, the national parole board and the director of B.C. Penitentiary.

Meadley said so far they have received approval only from provincial Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Bruce is serving a life term for the contract killing in 1970 of a nightclub dancer and has been involved in a number of other hostage incidents.

"The media has made him into 'Super Con'," Meadley said. " I see him as an extremely intelligent . . . warm and sensible."

Vancouver Nuclear Meet

The nuclear power issue heats up again in B.C. next week with the opening Wednesday in Vancouver of hearings by the federal Committee on Nuclear Issues in the Community.

The three-day conference expected to draw 300 delegates is sponsored jointly by the Science Council of Canada and the Royal Society of Canada, and will hear scientists, engineers, nuclear critics and industry representatives discuss issues related to nuclear power generation.

The recent discovery of uranium near Kamloops and the prospect of a significant mining industry focus new attention on the debate whether nuclear power is a practical or acceptable alternative energy source.

An inquiry into uranium mining in the province has already been announced by Environment Minister Rafe Mair and environmental groups have suggested a two-year moratorium on mining meanwhile.

'School Oversell' Marked 1960s

KELOWNA (CP) — Much of today's disillusionment with education is the result of the 1960s oversell of what its benefits were to society, Dr. George Pedersen, Simon Fraser University president, said Friday.

Pedersen told the Central Okanagan Teachers Association convention here that economists extolled the virtues of the "human capital theory" which states if society invests heavily in education the returns will be high.

Politicians looked towards the educational system as the panacea to many of society's problems.

"The money really flowed and educators were just delighted," but few gave thought to accountability down the road, he said.

He said a credibility crisis arose from this high level of expectation.

"We no longer have a total unquestioning attitude towards education," Pedersen said.

Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) criticized Pedersen for not alluding to the role the government has in the education system.

"I think education is a natural whipping boy," she told the meeting, adding that "the general anti-education feeling is prompted by the present (Social Credit) government in Victoria."

She accused the government of turning the public against the public school system by placing increasing tax burdens for education at the local level and giving decision-making to a major central body.

She said Education Minister Pat McGeer is an elitist — more interested in universities than the public schools.

Broadcaster Laurier LaPierre told the convention that children can't reach full potential without first being recognized as individuals and having their rights protected.

He questioned the value of standard testing and central curricula where children in one district are compared with children in another.

"We are not grading potatoes," he said.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Research carried out in two aging James Bay houses in the last 18 months has produced a new space-age shortband radiotelephone.

It went on the market in January and already 30 of the fishermen heading for the roe herring fishery have installed the DE-1200 SSB Radiotelephone.

While the two houses on Michigan Street are unpretentious to say the least, brothers Terry and Ronald Daniels of Daniels Electronic Ltd. have made their mark in faraway places with the equipment they've produced since taking over the company after their father, Gordon, died in 1962.

Although the new set has only been on the market for weeks, Ron Daniels says he and his brother have received inquiries from as far away as Australia and Southeast Asia.

The DE-1200, which sells for close to $2,000, received governnment approval in late October.

The set is solid state, fully transistorized and its modular construction makes updating easy. It has 12 basic channels but these can be expanded to 23 channels, plus the distress one.

It has an effective noise squelch and a bar graph indicator that informs the operator when he is receiving maximum transmission.

New Zealand is considering making its commercial fishermen install automatic alarms, Daniels says, so the unit comes with the necessary equipment built in.

The 12-pound set is compact, and capable of communicating over long distances. From here to Hawaii, for example. Daniels says it also meets specifications set down by the race committee of the Victoria-Maui sailing race.

It operates efficiently on sea and on land and, because of its range, will be useful in the Arctic for communications between mobiles and between mobiles and base camps.

The brothers began working on the DE-1200 because the ministry of transport intends phasing out AM sets in the 1980s.

While installation of all radiotelephones needs expertise, the DE-1200 needs less than most, Daniels says. This makes it attractive to operators in outlying places.

Airport Re-Opening Advocated

VANCOUVER (CP) — An environmental impact statement prepared for Transport Canada has supported the re-opening of the Boundary Bay airport, a former RCAF base in Delta.

The statement, released this week, concludes that the advantages vastly outweigh the disadvantages of re-opening the former Royal Canadian Air Force Base as a general aviation airport by 1981.

The airport would be restricted to piston engine and turboprop aircraft under 12,500 pounds and to helicopters, say department spokesmen.

The federal environmental assessment panel held public hearings on the proposal last summer then issued guidelines to Transport Canada for the preparation of the impact statement.

The report says the re-opening will increase the capacity of the Vancouver-area general aviation system by 17 per cent "at a location which is convenient to many users."

It said only minor changes would be necessary to make the airport operational.

However, the report warns the economic benefits will be offset by adverse effects on aircraft operations, esthetics, recreation and conservation in the area. It added measures can be taken to mitigate damage.

Complaints from only one houehold can be expected it said while 10 other households could anticipate occasional noise, which can be reduced by improved insulation.

Lornex

Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd. announced net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978 were $14,354,000 or $1.74 a share, compared with $7,781,000 or 94 cents a share in 1977.

Revenue was $88.1 million, compared with $75.4 million the previous year.

Lornex said in a news release the improved earnings were due largely to higher prices for copper and molybdenum.

The price of copper averaged 73 cents a pound in 1978, compared with 60 cents a pound in the previous year, Lornex said.

Scotiabank

The Bank of Nova Scotia announced that profits for the quarter ended Jan. 31 totalled $43.8 million, an increase of $9.3 million or $1.06 a share over the same period a year ago.

Assets were $28.6 billion, an increase of 24.3 per cent from the same date last year, largely reflecting strong asset growth in most international markets.

C. E. Ritchie, chairman and president, said Canadian currency "interest spread for the quarter was narrower than that recorded in the first quarter of 1978, as increases in the cost of deposits have not been matched by comparable increases in lending rates."

"Other operating revenue was up 23 per cent from last year, whereas operating expenses in total were 15.3 per cent higher, due mainly to higher salaries and other personnel expenses."

The bank declared a dividend of 31 cents a share for the quarter ended April 30, 1979, an increase of two cents a share, payable April 27 to shareholders of record March 28, 1979.

Bank of Montreal

The Bank of Montreal reported its balance of revenues for the first quarter, ending Jan. 31, rose to $58.5 million, an increase of almost 46 per cent over the same period last year.

President William Mulholland attributed the increase to growth in assets and controlled operating expenses. After-tax profit for the quarter was $1.32 a share, compared with $0.94 for same period in 1978.

The bank paid dividends of $15 million, or 31 cents a share, compared with $11.3 million, or 26½ cents a share, for the first quarter last year.

Petrofina

Petrofina Canada Ltd. reported profits fell in 1978 to $23.7 million, or $2.37 a share, from $30.7 million, or $3.07 a share, for 1977.

The company blamed low profit margins on sales of refined products and chemicals in the first three quarters of 1978 for the decrease. But the company noted that final quarter returns showed a marked improvement.

Petrofina's average daily production of crude oil and natural gas was 17,900 barrels a day in 1978, unchanged from the previous year. Natural gas sales dropped to 73.3 million cubic feet a day from 81.1 million cubic feet per day in 1977.

Strike Notice Served On Burnaby Refineries

Two Lower Mainland oil refineries have been served with 72-hour strike notice.

About 126 employees at Shell Canada Ltd.'s refinery in Burnaby served notice Wednesday. However, mediator Jack Chapalas has been appointed and is meeting with both parties.

No strike is possible as long as the mediator is involved.

Shell spokesman John McClurg said Friday the company has offered the employees a wage increase of 8½ per cent in the first year and 7½ per cent in the second year of a two-year agreement.

McClurg said the dispute is significant from an energy supply point of view.

About 100 employees at Chevron Canada Ltd.'s plant in Burnaby have also served strike notice. Their contract also expired Jan. 31.

Union spokesmen were not available for comment.

Before the Judge

A 20-year-old Colwood man was charged Friday with two counts of criminal negligence in connection with an Oct. 8 traffic fatality.

Paul Gordon Ormiston, of 611 Kelley Road, was charged with criminal negligence causing the death of 21-year-old Daniel Frank Wiedman, of 2315 Carol Ann Place, and criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle.

Wiedman died Oct. 10 in Royal Jubilee Hospital, two days after a single-car mishap in the 1100-block Goldstream.

Defence lawyer Roger Cardinal elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing was set for July 18.

* * *

Judge William Ostler remanded a 35-year-old man until March 23 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing on a breaking and entering charge.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie re-elected trial by magistrate on behalf of Brian John Byers, 99 Wellington, just prior to a scheduled preliminary hearing and entered a plea of guilty.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court the break-in occurred Sept. 17 at the Lucky Turn Food Store at Moss and May streets. He said Byers was seen kicking in a glass window and entering the premises. Victoria city police were called, Laughton continued, and Byers was caught inside with $5 worth of pennies in a bag and another six rolls of pennies in his possession.

A 23-year-old man who broke windows of an apartment block Thursday night was fined $25 and was also ordered to make restitution for $179.25 damages.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge Fred Green the incident occurred just before midnight when Victoria city police were called after Little was seen breaking glass at 550 Quadra Street.

Mulligan said Little was arrested hiding under some bushes a short distance away and admitted doing the damage. He told police he was mad because he was "rolled" the night before and he thought the person who did it lived in the apartment building.

Mulligan also said Little was convicted of mischief in Port Alberni on Feb. 23, 1978, and was given a suspended sentence and three months' probation at that time.

Green placed Little on four months probation and warned him that jail loomed if he continued the pattern of behavior.

* * *

A Vancouver man, 30-year-old Robert Joseph Vaillancourt, was charged with defrauding the Human Resources Ministry of $1,536.25 between Nov. 6, 1977, and March 1, 1978.

Vaillancourt was remanded in custody until next Wednesday for bail hearing and election of trial method.

* * *

A 28-year-old man who drove less than a month after receiving a jail term for impaired driving was given another 21 days in jail for driving while under suspension.

Court was told Richard Martin Giese, of 897 Claremont, was checked in the Donut King parking lot at 5471 Hamsterley Road at 5 a.m., Dec. 16, and was found to be under suspension.

Mulligan said Giese was sentenced to 14 days in jail Nov. 24, 1978, when he was convicted of impaired driving. Giese had a previous conviction for impaired driving, on Nov. 26, 1975, when he was fined $400.

Electronic Device Notifies Neighbor in Emergency

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

An elderly woman living alone recently was talked into entering a nursing home because her daughter feared she'd have a serious fall and not be able to call help.

The woman was in relatively good health and quite content to stay in her home and look after herself. But she took her daughter's advice reluctantly.

Today she is happily back in her own house — thanks to a new electronic device called Protectalert.

If her mother fell and couldn't get up, she would grasp a small device on a pendant around her neck or in her pocket, and press a button.

Things would begin to happen. Her next door neighbor's telephone would ring. On picking up the receiver the neighbor would hear a recording: "Stand by for an emergency message. Medical attention is needed by Mrs. Smith, 1368 Arrowhead Road."

The message would be repeated. It there was no answer at the neighbor's home, the automatic device would call in succession a series of other numbers until someone answered.

"This device is going to ease the lot of many people who live or work alone," said Cal McFarlane, who represents the Vancouver company which manufactures them.

"We call it the home-care unit. It is useful for people with heart problems and invalids, anyone who may need some medical attention."

Components of the device includes a miniature transmitter which a person carries around. It is small enough to be concealed in a pocket or purse.

The transmitter will trigger an automatic telephone dialer which will call up to 10 pre-programmed numbers and deliver pre-recorded requests for assistance.

McFarlane said Protectalert, developed by Nat Ross of Vancouver, has been on the mainland market for about a year, and has been available here since December.

The fire alarm system part of the device includes a special smoke detector. If a fire started when the homeowner was away, a relay activated by the detector's siren would phone the fire department or a neighbor. The recorded announcement would give the location of the fire.

The device is equipped with a battery in the event of a power failure.

There are two models of Protectalert. The single-channel system can only be used for home care, or alternately as a fire or burglar alarm. The two-channel unit can be used as both a home care and alarm system.

Ross has also developed a third unit which he has called Buddy Guard.

GRACE OUT TO REDUCE WELFARE

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy is stepping up her campaign to get businesses in B.C. to find work for people on welfare.

Mrs. McCarthy said she is sending letters to 60,000 businessmen asking them to prove there is a way to stop what she termed the welfare cycle by providing jobs for welfare recipients.

She said it is an apppeal to the balance sheet rather than to the heart because more and more money is being spent on welfare, and the resulting tax burden is difficult to bear.

Wider Sub Role Eyed

Patricia Bay scientists plan to expand the role of the institute in deep-sea investigation by using the Pisces IV submarine.

Regional oceanographer Dr. Pat Nasmyth, of the Institute of Ocean Sciences, said recently the use of Pisces at present is limited by sea conditions, particularly during launching and retrieval by its tender Pandora II.

Its use has been confined mainly to protected B.C. coastal waters and inlets, although last year the vessel was used to examine a radioactive dump site off the coast of California.

Amin Recaptures Kenya Border Base

MALABA, Kenya-Uganda Border (UPI) — Uganda Saturday admitted opponents of President Idi Amin had seized the key border town of Tororo, but said loyal troops recaptured the town and massacred the invaders.

Diplomatic sources said Amin's troops captured and executed on the spot at least six Ugandan exiles who took part in the attack. Three guerrillas who escaped said the scene was a bloodbath.

Despite that victory for Amin, the embattled dictator faced another threat from the south, where Tanzanian troops have captured the Ugandan cities of Masaka and Mbarara and were reported to be marching north toward the capital, Kampala, without resistance.

Exile sources in Nairobi reported another mutiny by Ugandan soldiers stationed at Soroti, 100 miles northwest of Malaba in Uganda's northern interior, and said rebels had seized control of the town.

There was no confirmation of the report and attempts to telephone Soroti were unsuccessful.

Three guerrillas escaped across the border from Tororo into Kenya after Ugandan forces recaptured the town Friday night with warplanes, tanks and armored personnel carriers. They told authorities most of their 50-man attack force was wiped out.

They said their force of Ugandan exiles had attacked from Tanzania, crossing Lake Victoria in boats. They seized conrtol of Tororo with the help of mutinous troops belonging to Uganda's Air and Seaborne Regiment based there.

The guerrillas said fighting was confined to the barracks area in Tororo. Ugandan troops finally leveled the buildings with heavy gunfire, killing everyone inside, they reported.

The successful counterattack by Ugandan troops, who were believed to have been rushed from the town of Jinja.

Hooker Made $150,000

EDMONTON (CP) — A 24-year-old woman testified Friday she made $150,000 in less than three years as a prostitute in Edmonton.

Her earnings averaged "$200 to $300 a day, sometimes less, sometimes more," she told District Court Judge J. B. Feehan.

But, she added, "I did not work weekends."

The woman, who was testifying in the trial of Richard Turner, 35, charged with living off the avails of prostitution, said she now is a college student.

There wasn't exactly a warm welcome waiting at Silverwood Dairies. Just manager Ivor Fuller with a scowl on his face and no handshake. And on his desk there was a piece of paper with two words written: Calm Down!

He needed the reminder. For since the Times front-page story on soccer player Danny Hood being fired appeared a week ago, the Victoria dairy has been besieged with indignant callers and Fuller has had seven sleepless nights.

"I was shocked and horrified when that story appeared," Fuller said. "And since then it's been total abuse with a rival company using the story, radio stations editorializing yet never calling us, customers cancelling orders and all sorts of crank calls coming in.

"You know, one of the principles of being a Christian is that no matter what someone does to you, you love him," the manager pointed out. "But I'm finding it very difficult to hang onto this principle as far as you're concerned, Mr. Low!"

Frankly, I can live with that, but I do resent the suggestion that I didn't at least try to give "both sides of the story."

When Hood came into the Times to tell how he lost his job after taking a week off (having been refused the time) to train with Canada's Olympic soccer team in California, I immediately phoned Silverwood's plant superintendent Alex Speirs who was, in fact, the one who did the firing.

Speirs did offer to sit down with Hood and me and discuss the problem but all strictly "off the record." All he would say on the record was: "It's an internal problem and that's how we resolved it." There were no suggestions that I talk with Fuller, or anyone else for that matter.

Not until it hit print. Then we were accused of "rushing" with our story, even though Hood was fired two weeks before it appeared.

There were two sides to the story, as there always are, I was told. Danny's was that he asked for time off to try out for and then go to a training camp with our national soccer team. He was refused, went anyway because he didn't want to miss the opportunity of a lifetime, and was fired.

Silverwood's story is that they didn't know where Danny was going and that when he got back they didn't know where he had been.

According to Speirs, Danny merely asked for time off to try out for a soccer team and, as he'd once tried out for a pro club before, they thought that was what he was doing again. The request came at the last minute and, because there was already one man off sick in the four-man ice-cream plant where Danny had worked for two years, it was turned down.

When Danny returned to work a week later, Speirs said he still didn't say where he'd been but merely remarked "Gee, I guess I've had it."

If Silverwoods had known it was an Olympic team before Danny went, then someone would have worked for him, Fuller said. Or if they'd known where he'd been when he got back, he wouldn't have been fired.

Even so, the dairy can't take him back now, Fuller said, because it would only look as though they're admitting they were wrong and were reacting to all the pressure. And that's the sad part.

"Any company would be thrilled to have an employee represent Canada," Fuller said. "Hey, there's nothing but glory in it for us. It's gratuitous advertising. Any company not realizing that would have to be nuts.

"I'm on my last lap," Fuller said "and to have this kind of thing in your retirement year is pretty hard to take. I got my start with Silverwood 47 years ago (when what is now the oldest dairy in B.C. was known as Northwestern Creamery) and that job came through my sports affiliations."

He was a swimmer, he explained, and was representing Canada at the time.

"Over the years, we've developed an image that I think is one of a matchless corporate citizen," Fuller said. "We've sponsored basketball, baseball, curling and bowling teams and individual football players and I believe we were the first company in Victoria ever to sponsor a sports team," the manager said.

"We've had a union to deal with yet we haven't had a day of strike for 40 years, so this kind of suggestion is ridiculous," he added. "It's pretty obvious that any company that behaved like we're accused of behaving wouldn't operate 67 weeks, let alone 67 years!"

Then Ivor Fuller glanced back at his Calm Down sign and reminded me as I left: "You're sure not in the category of a friend at this point."

But those Christian principles shone through . . . and I got that handshake at last.

Mrs. Mitchell outside sun-heated home

Fuel Cost Cut 40 Per Cent By Solar Heat

First-season results of a pilot solar-assisted home heating system in Fairfield indicate as much as 40 per cent saving on fuel oil, according to the supplier and statistics from B.C. Hydro and Gulf Oil.

The Mitchell house — a home built around 1920 — was fitted with a roof collector last June by Ark Solar Products.

Mrs. A.J. Mitchell said there has been a noticeable drop in fuel consumption, although she has not reviewed her bills in detail.

Ark proprietor Gil Parker said the system has been monitored and shows that 60 per cent of the heat normally supplied to that house by furnace oil is being provided by sunshine.

Water circulated by an electric pump is heated by solar radiation and stored in a basement tank from which it is fed to a radiator in the oil-fired hot air furnace duct. Oil is not consumed unless water temperature drops below the thermostat setting.

At the same time, water in storage preheats the domestic hot water tank, reducing the electrical demand for that system.

Parker said records of electrical consumption in the house had not been segregated to show what proportion went to water heating, but he suggested the saving now could be considerable because there is a pre-heating advantage of 50 degrees F. in winter months and 90 degrees in the summer.

Records of degree-days for the past eight years were consulted for comparison in the season to date. When final records are complete, Parker expects even greater efficiency, even though he said this winter had been colder than normal.

"Of course, none of these figures indicate the true cost savings," Parker said. "The reduction in fuel oil consumption totally ignores the fact that oil prices rose 16 per cent and electricity jumped 25 per cent last year."

Because of the interest shown in the Mitchell experience, inspection tours are limited to those made by appointment through Ark Solar Products.

Survey Reveals House Prices Up

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria house prices have shot upwards since October, a sign the local real estate slump may be over, according to a survey by Royal Trust Co.

The value of a standard three bedroom home in the Victoria area, up to eight years old, was listed at $66,000 in February, up $2,500 or 3.9 per cent from $63,500 in October, the report shows.

In the previous four months, from June, 1978, to October, 1978, the price had not moved at all.

The value of a deluxe four bedroom house in the Victoria area, up to eight years old, was $97,000 in February, up $2,000 or about two per cent from $95,000 in October. During the previous four months, from June to October, the price had edged up by about $1,000 from $94,000.

The prices are average for houses in good areas. The smaller house is 1,200 square feet on a 6,000 square foot lot while the deluxe house is 2,000 square feet on a 7,500 square foot lot.

Victoria Real Estate Board president Bev Highton today said the survey confirms the observation of local realtors that the local housing market appears to have bottomed out and prices are moving up once again.

"Real estate goes in cycles and we have just gone through a slow period lasting almost three years," he said.

"The slump seems to be ending now. There is more optimism everywhere and it appears house prices will move gradually upwards for the balance of the year."

At present levels, Victoria houses are underpriced compared with similar accommodation in other major Canadian cities, he said.

Out of 91 residential areas in Canada, Victoria ranks 27th in terms of its price for the three bedroom home and 25th out of 91 for the four-bedroom home.

Calgary topped both lists and Vancouver was second.

On the Lower Mainland, the $66,000 three-bedroom home would cost $99,500 in Kerrisdale, $84,000 in West Vancouver, $73,000 in Burnaby, $67,000 in Richmond but only $54,000 in Surrey.

The $97,000 four-bedroom deluxe home would cost $160,000 in Kerrisdale, $127,500 in West Vancouver, and $115,000 in Burnaby, but only $90,000 in Richmond and just $70,000 in Surrey.

In Calgary the four-bedroom home would be $176,000 and the three-bedroom one $116,000.

The survey is conducted every four months by Royal Trust to assist its real estate section and also to help companies work out financial arrangments when transferring employees from city to city.

Highton said the price changes reflect a feeling in the local market that real estate values are rising as the Victoria economy improves.

"The tourist industry is helping to create some badly-needed jobs and we have everything else that anyone could want, including a good climate and beautiful surroundings," Highton said.

If the convention centre is completed soon, even more jobs would result, and real estate values would be bolstered further.

Saanich Planners To Discuss Industry

A special meeting of Saanich's planning committee may be held within a month to settle the Royal Oak industrial park issue, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Friday.

He said council will have to decide whether to ask for a second public hearing on the issue or to press ahead with an application to have part of the land rezoned for residential use.

Council rejected a proposal for industrial development on the 128 acres of land at Glanford-Vanalman after the first public hearing but voters in a referendum subsequently favored industrial development at the site.

Meanwhile, council has endorsed a request from one of the property owners to have part of the land rezoned for residential use.

However, this would require an amendment of the municipality's community plan.

An application to amend the plan has gone to the Capital Region District but the CRD board has not acted on it, presumably because of the continuing public debate, on the merits of industrial development on the land.

Couvelier said the issue would have to be resolved soon.

Group Home Stalled

Eight mentally handicapped persons who had hoped to have a group home in operation in the city early this year will now have to wait several more months to make the move, if ever.

City council has told the group's sponsors, the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, the property at 936 Redfern will have to be rezoned to accommodate the group home.

The association has already filed the rezoning application but the procedure, which requires a public hearing, will likely take three to four months to complete.

A number of residents in the area are opposed to the project, feeling it would have an adverse effect on their own property values.

Just Call Charlie 'Maestro'

By AB KENT

But for NDP backbencher Charles Barber, 29, taking the podium will gratify a lifelong ambition.

Over the next three months the Victoria MLA and a dozen senior citizens — the core of the Hampton Concert Orchestra — will work together to determine their compatibility.

If things work out, Barber will get the job — unpaid — of leading and rebuilding the 11-year-old orchestra into a performing organization of notice in the community.

Barber is less than half the average age of the Hampton musicians and has never held a position as a conductor although he has long wanted to lead an orchestra and has studied the art.

"I'm really grateful for this opportunity. It falls into a long-time ambition and recent experience," Barber said.

That experience includes casual study of conducting in Vancouver and a course given in California by Warren Jones, assistant conductor of the San Francisco Opera.

Barber has been a musician most of his life.

He plays violin — not terribly well, he admits — and is known as a pianist and sometime composer and arranger who has worked with choral groups and stage bands.

His favorite musicians include Benjamin Britten, Prokofiev, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms and recently he has been working on the conductor's score of Brahms' Second Symphony.

It requires a highly trained ear, familiarity with all instruments of the orchestra, ability to read score at a glance, deal with a specialized language and to maintain rhythyms containing more than one beat.

Ultimately, the conductor must be able to bring out a full range of effort by his musicians, or everything will fail, Barber said.

Mel Knudsen, founding conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, directed the Hampton group for more than four years until last year.

For the past six months the orchestra has been without a conductor, held together only by its dedicated members and their trumpet-playing secretary Mrs. Christina Dunton, at 59 the youngster of the orchestra.

She was 13 when she began playing, getting her basic training in brass bands and church orchestras.

George Johnson, 86, is a charter member, playing mellophone since the orchestra was formed with the opening of Hampton hall in 1968. John Gough, flutist, retired school superintendent, has been a member since 1971.

The other instruments include two clarinets, two cellos, violin, viola, euphonium, bassoon and piano.

"You have to perform before critical audiences to develop," Barber said, convinced he has the makings of a first class amateur orchestra.

Ideally, it will grow to perhaps 50 members, strengthened by more strings and woodwinds and Barber sees the possibility of adding young musicians.

There are few concert opportunities today for youngsters since the demise of the Greater Victoria Schools Orchestra, but the Hampton Orchestra should permit the accomplished older musicians to pass along their skills.

For himself, Barber figures conducting is the most rigorous exercise he has come across: "It's the best thing I've done for a year. Music is really the best thing, the world's most honest language — especially compared with politics."

Big Bill Looms To Fix Big Drip

Repairs to the leaky Dawson Reservoir near Buchart Gardens will cost about $92,000, the Capital Region District has been told.

Thurber Consultants Ltd. of Victoria, said in a report the repair job would would also mean the temporary evacuation of a house owned by Sandra McCusker at 1205 Benvenuto Avenue.

The report says the leak could be stopped by installing a waterproof lining of plastic or cement on the reservoir walls.

An alternative would be to restrict the level of the water in the reservoir to about 15 feet, the report says.

Tests taken last year showed the reservoir leaks more than 133,000 gallons over a three-week period.

Vikettes Survive 'Ridiculous' Replay

REGINA — University of Victoria has advanced to the Canadian intercollegiate women's basketball final, but to get there the scrappy Vikettes had to overcome a protest, a sleepless night, another injury to one of their scoring standouts, and overtime.

Forced to replay the last part of their game against Guelph Gryphons when the Ontario champions protested Victoria's 52-51 victory in a Friday semi-final, the Vikettes came back this morning to defeat the Eastern team 63-60 in overtime and thereby advance to tonight's national final against defending champion Luarentian Vees.

But despite this morning's victory, Victoria coach Kathy Shields was angry. She will lodge an official complaint with the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union over the protest committee's decision. It was a "sublimely ridiculous" replay order that may have cost Vikettes the services of rookie sensation Jane Favelli.

Favelli, who injured a knee before Christmas and returned to the lineup only last week, reinjured the leg in this morning's warmup and did not play in the 13-minute "game" that sent the Vikettes, a wild-card entry in the tournament, into the final.

"It was ridiculous," Shields said of the protest. "We had to get up at 7 a.m., and after my girls stayed awake half the night. They were scared, couldn't sleep. We had to play this thing, with tension that you wouldn't believe, and now we have to go against (Laurentian) a team that is nice and fresh."

Ordered to replay the final eight minutes of what appeared to be a victory Friday, Vikettes opened the game this morning with a 44-37 lead. With just over a minute remaining, Vikettes led 52-46 but the tough Guelph team scored three straight baskets to tie it (52-52) and force a five-minute overtime.

Victoria led 61-60 with less than a half minute in overtime and Suc Shaw cliched the victory with the game's final basket.

Vikettes' apparent 52-51 victory Friday was wiped out when Guelph's post-game protest of a scoring mistake was upheld by tournament officials despite the fact that the referees had signed the scoresheet.

Guelph protested that one its baskets was not recorded and officials reviewed videotapes of the game. They ruled a Guelph basket had been missed with eight minutes remaining. Vikettes were ahead 44-39 at the time.

The last eight minutes of the game were ordered replayed with the score 44-37 in Victoria's favor.

"In the 10 years I've been involved with basketball under international rules, I've never heard of a replay being ordered over a protest," he said. The protest should have been lodged as soon as the oversight was made and dealt with immediately, he added.

"They always rule on a protest right away. If the referee signed the scoresheet, that's it.")

Laurentian, going after a fifth consecutive national title under coach Norm Vickery, made it to the final with an easy 75-52 victory over Bishop's University Gaiterettes of Lennoxville, Que., in Friday night's other semi-final.

Eileen Gulaska paced the Vees with 15 points.

In consolation play Friday, University of New Brunswick Red Bloomers whipped the host Regina Cougarettes 74-57 and will meet Winnipeg Lady Wesmen in the consolation final. Winnipeg downed Calgary Dinnies, the Canada West conference champs, 54-44 in the other losers' bracket semi-final.

Graeme Wants Fast Cars To Be Part of Lifestyle

This might come under the heading of fast cars, fast bucks and fast women, which are sundry items sometimes associated with sport, but I don't think so. Besides, you can't have the last one without the others. But hoo there, boy, that's another story.

This one is of a young man's fancy. Only the "fast cars" bit is true. After that, who knows?

Graeme Teague of Sidney is 20 years of age, blonde, good looking, presentable, a surface supply diver by occupation (unemployed at present) and he's got this urge.

It's to do with his lifestyle.

Simply put, Graeme wants to be a Formula race car driver. "It's the only thing I have ever really wanted to do", he says. "How else can I explain it?"

Which is great. But Graeme can't even get out on the track. He has all the desire in the world but he's short one important commodity — money.

* * *

Graeme knows it's tough. But he figures maybe somebody might listen. And, just in case, he has a built-in plan he is prepared to explain to any "potential sponsor" who might be partial to his unique position.

The approach is not new. Many others get their start, or get help, this way. So why not ask?

Graeme's dream isn't new either. It's been burning a hole in his mind for several years now. But where to start? He doesn't have the money to race his own car and without unlimited funds that's out of the question.

Then he heard of a school for drivers, applied for particulars, entered and, after graduation day last fall (he has the certificate), the idea took hold for good.

Graeme, who had never raced cars, or been interested in the stock-car end of the game, decided the only way to find out if he had a future in the sport, was to gather his available resources and enrol at the Jim Russell Racing Drivers School at Mont Tremblant in Quebec.

He would get the best of instruction, would soon find out what stuff he was made of, whether he really was a race driver or not, and then he would decide on his future.

"It was just tremendous," he said of his three days at the school. The cost was $650, plus transportation. "The course was very comprehensive and by the end of the third day I was amazed at what I had learned."

* * *

So he was hooked. But broke. Then he thought: "Maybe somebody might be interested. I can only try."

Graeme was enthusiastic when he explained what the school was all about in the over-all training of a race driver. The first three days were only the beginning. After that, for graduates, there would be a series of 11 races, spread over eight weekends; a total immersion in the racing scene during that time — working as a track official, marshall, flagman, timekeeper, whatever; fair and fierce competition and, for the top three drivers, the prize of a trip to England for further runoffs at the school there.

GRAEME TEAGUE

Everything in cars, equipment, travel entry fees, etc., would be supplied for the winners. More runoffs would follow, and, to the winners would go more spoils, in this case, all-expense paid entries to more races in Europe . . . and, from there, Graeme hopefully would drive on to the end of his rainbow.

* * *

The ultimate, of course, would be to become a driver in the class of Canada's famous Gilles Villeneuve or Emerson Fittipaldi, who ranks as one of the world's highest-paid athletes. Both are graduates of the Russell School.

Possible, but improbable. But that's the Graeme dream. Most young men have one.

His immediate concern is that he doesn't have the $5,500 he needs to finish it; or, to get through that next eight weeks of school. And that doesn't include accomodation, meals and transportation.

It's a long-shot hope at best. He knows it. "But if I don't try, I'll never know, will I?" As to the possible risks involved, he was unconcerned. "What I'm doing now is considered dangerous, too," he said.

His phone number is 656-1542.

Why did Graeme get an audience?

That's easy. When the listener was younger, he had a dream. It was to be a pilot.

He was.

Rebounding and Anderson Spell Trouble For Dinosaurs

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

There are two reasons for the University of Victoria Vikings' landslide victory over Calgary Dinosaurs in Friday night's Canada West University Athletic Association basketball playoff opener at McKinnon Gym — rebounds and Ted Anderson.

Vikings whipped the Dinos 108-70 before 1,700 fans to make amends for a disgraceful showing in Calgary two weeks ago in which they dropped a pair of schedule games.

A repeat win tonight at McKinnon would give UVic the best-of-three series in two straight. If Calgary can rebound, however, the deciding game goes tomorrow afternoon at 2, also at McKinnon.

The series winner heads into next weekend's Canadian Interuniversity playoff tournament at Calgary's Stampede Corral as the Canada West champion. The Dinos get into the tournament, win or lose, because they're the host team.

It was strictly no contest Friday as Vikings, first-place finisher in the schedule with a 17-3 record, held their normally high-scoring foes to only eight baskets in the first 13 minutes of play and ran away to a 58-40 halftime lead.

It was the same story in the second half as the Dinos were held to just four baskets in the first seven minutes.

UVic did it on the boards, grabbing an unprecedented 63 rebounds, including 40 offensive rebounds, to Calgary's 23 (nine offensive).

Anderson was the game's outstanding player, a development that came as no surprise to coach Ken Shields who moved him from the bench into the starting lineup.

An excellent clutch performer and steadying influence all season, Anderson played his best game as a Viking. Shields assigned him to check Pat Lee, the league-leading rebounder and Calgary's top scorer.

Lee got one rebound and nine points. In contrast, Anderson counted 16 points and picked off 10 rebounds, eight of them offensive.

Calgary coach Gary Howard said before the game his team could have trouble staying with the taller, defensively-sound Vikings.

"We have a young team with a lot of freshmen," he said, "and we're not as sound defensively as we should be. Usually we have to win by simply scoring more points than our opponents."

The loss was the first for Calgary in nine games.

Top rebounder was Vikings' Gerald Kazanowski with 13 (10 offensive) while Reni Dolcetti grabbed 11 (seven under the Calgary boards) for UVic.

Six Viking scorers hit double figures, which normally is Calgary's act. All five of the Dinos' starters had averaged 10 or more points over the team's last 10 games heading into Friday's playoff.

This time, however, Vikings got 22 points from Dolcetti, 16 from Anderson, 14 each from Robbie Parris and Chris Hebb, 13 from Mickey Welder and 12 from Ian Hyde-Lay.

The Canada West champion will meet the Great Plains Athletic Conference winner in the CIAU first round next Thursday in Calgary.

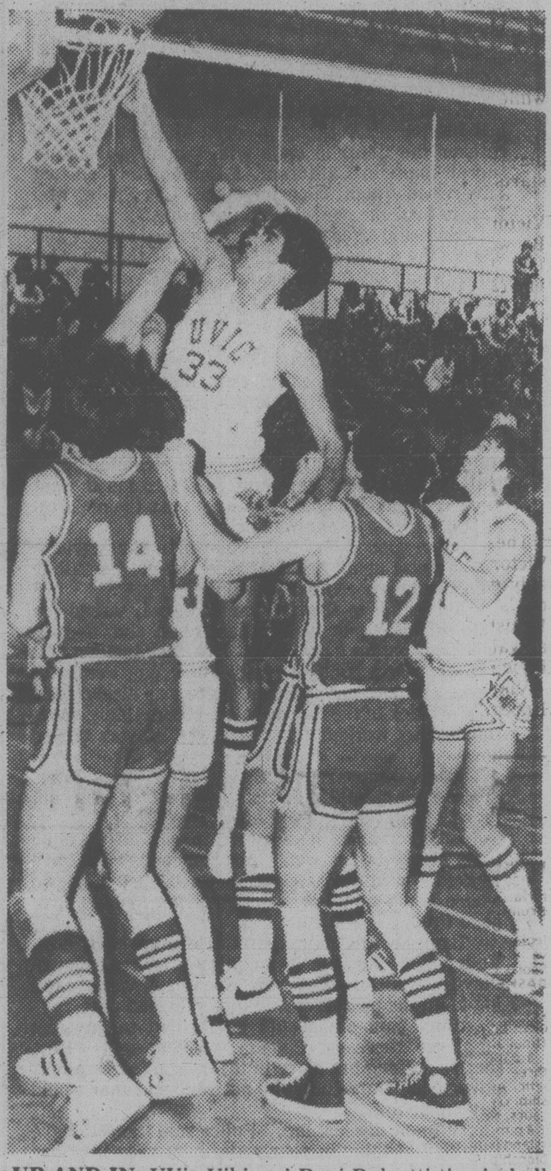
Winnipeg Wesmen took a 1-0 lead in a best-of-three G-PAC playoff Friday with a 78-71 win over Lakehead Nor'Westers in Winnipeg.

Lakehead's presence in the national final could be something of an embarrassment to the CIAU. The Thunder Bay school used an ineligible U.S. player early in the season.

The CIAU ruled only that Lakehead could not be ranked nationally during the season and could not play in the national final as a wild card entry. But if Lakehead wins its way into the Calgary tournament, it will be permitted to compete.

VIKINGS (108) — Ian Hyde-Lay 12, Greg Kazanowski 2, Tom NArbeshuber 4, Mickey Welder 13, Chris Hebb 14, Robbie Parris 14, Ted Anderson 16, Gerald Kazanowski 8, Ken Kirzinger, Reni Dolcetti 22, Gary Budd, Kelly Dukeshire 3.

CALGARY (70) — Cal Keil, Pat Lee 9, Mark Jorgenson 14, Jeff MArkeri 2, Geoff Thompson 10, Greg Van Dolah 3, Scott Stevenson 7, George Hardisty, Paul Babocock 6, John Thoutenhoofd, Eric Duerksen 19.



UP AND IN: UVic Vikings' Reni Dolcetti tips in ball during Friday night's Canada West basketball playoff opener at McKinnon Gym against Calgary Dinosaurs. Dolcetti scored 22 points as Vikings romped to 108-70 decision. That's UVic guard Ian Hyde-Lay backing up Dolcetti while Mark Jorgenson (14) and Pat Lee (12) of Calgary watch helplessly. Second game in best-of-three series is tonight at McKinnon Gym at 8. (Irving Strickland photo).

Lindsay Gets Last Lassie

MONTREAL (CP) — When the final rock was thrown, it was British Columbia's Lindsay Sparkes and her North Vancouver rink who emerged the winners of the last — and longest — Lassie.

Sparkes, the 1976 titlist, skipped her rink to a 7-4 victory over Manitoba's Chris Pidzarko of Stony Mountain in the final of the Canadian women's curling championship Friday at the Town of Mount Royal Arena.

"That little pewter Lassie that you get holds so much meaning," Sparkes said. "It's just super to have it, and to know that that's the last one that is ever going to be given out is truly special."

Macdonald Tobacco Inc., sponsor of the event for 19 years, ended its role in the championship with the closing ceremony. No new sponsor has been announced.

The B.C. rink, including lead Lorraine Bowles, second Robin Wilson and third Dawn Knowles, went 8-2 through the round-robin to finish first and earn a bye to the final.

But five teams tied for second at 7-3, and three tie-breaker games were needed Thursday night to determine two semi-finalists. Manitoba beat Newfoundland's Sue Ann Bartlett of Labrador City 10-2 in that meeting earlier Friday.

This year was the first that a playoff system has been in effect, and the five-way tie was unprecedented.

B.C. took control of the title game early, and Pidzarko, who played third on her sister Cathy's winning entry last year, never was able to overcome Sparkes' early advantage, which was 5-1 after five ends.

Tough Panthers, Islanders Advance to Island Finale

NANAIMO — Parkland Panthers' coach Joe Milligan considers playoff basketball "as a new ball game" and he touched all bases in preparing the Sidney squad for the Vancouver Island high school boys' championship.

He ticked off "pressure situations and mental prepardness" as some of the grooming points he worked on last week.

The pressure didn't materialize but the Panthers were obviously honed to a fine edge psychologically and physically. Parkland was in complete command as it ripped into the dynasty created by Oak Bay over the past two decades.

Winners of the Island championship in 12 of the last 18 years, Oak Bay's 1979 title hopes were shredded by Panthers' solid, 60-39 victory in a semi-final meeting Friday. That sent Parkland into the final against defending champion Nanaimo Islanders tonight and also assured Panthers of their first trip to the provincial tournament, to be played March 14-17 in Vancouver.

The road to the final wasn't as easy for Nanaimo. The defending champions had problems galore with the scrappy Cowichan Thunderbirds before achieving a 69-64 victory. Cowichan, which has never won the Island title, led 20-16 and 37-34 after the first two quarters but a hot stretch turned things around. Nanaimo ran in 12 straight points in the third quarter and the run returned poise to the Islanders' game.

With the Islanders and Panthers assured of two berths, Oak Bay, Cowichan, Mt. Douglas Rams and Courtenay Towhees will have to battle it out today for the third Island spot in the B.C. tournament. The Rams went against Oak Bay while Cowichan met Courtenay in morning matchups on the consolation side.

Mt. Doug, sparked by its one-two scoring combination of Russ Mosher and Jay Loukes, kept its hopes burning by trimming Belmont Braves 79-50 while the Towhees humbled Campbell River Tyees 84-46.

Can the Bruins Sin Without Big Boris?

New Westminster Bruins will have to do without Boris Fistric and Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe has mixed feelings about the defenceman's absence from tonight's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

The Western Division rivals, separated by only three points in their jockeying for second place, face off at 8:30.

The Cougars will be without rookie forward Brad Palmer while New Westminster will have to go without Fistric and Neil Meadmore as the result of suspensions imposed from last week's confrontation in which 270 penalty minutes were imposed.

Normally, one would consider Cougars fared best in the suspension department.

"I'm not so sure," Shupe said Friday. "Our forwards don't seem to have much trouble working around Boris. If he's not going to be on the ice, then I hope their other defencemen can make the same amount of mistakes."

The six-foot-three Fistric, darling of Victoria's boo-birds, drew a three-game suspension for striking Victoria captain Geordie Robertson after the Bruin had been ejected from last Saturday's game.

George Fritz, who missed six games because of a knee injury, is expected back in the lineup and Shupe also has called up 17-year-old Brad Yachimec, a forward from Edmonton, to bolster Victoria's roster.

Only two games were played Friday. The injury-riddled Saskatoon Blades upset Billings Bighorns 7-5 while the high-flying Brandon Wheat Kings defeated the Pats 5-2 in Regina.

Coaches Not Rushing Where Neilson Tread

Times News Services

Toronto Maple Leafs enter tonight's National Hockey League game against Philadelphia Flyers a victim of a sports premise — if a coach can't win get another.

However, the Leafs' problem is that they are finding it hard to get someone to replace Roger Neilson, who was fired Friday. He was sacked after a fifth consecutive Toronto loss, Thursday.

Assistant general manager John McLellan turned down the opportunity to be interim coach, citing his health. McLellan was Leafs coach from 1968 to 1972 and was forced out of the job by a stomach ulcer.

Thus Gerry McNamara, the Leafs' special assignment scout, will coach the team for its two weekend games.

However, Toronto's main choice apparently is Johnston.

It's not every night Washington Capitals get a breather in the schedule but coach Danny Belisle's troops probably can't wait until they play Vancouver Canucks again. Belisle thought his club's 6-2 win — the Caps' second in two games in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum this season — was likely their easiest victory of the campaign.

"We lulled them to sleep," Belisle said.

The Canucks and Capitals now have 19-34-10 records for 13th place in the NHL's overall standings and Vancouver now is 12 points behind Chicago, the Smythe Division leaders.

In Friday's other games, Atlanta Flames moved into possession of second place by upsetting the New York Islanders 3-2 and Chicago Black Hawks blanked Colorado Rockies 4-0.

Victoria Clubs Win Openers

Port Alberni, Courtenay and Uclulet, the other entrants in the seven-team, double-knockout tournament being played at Central Junior High, were to make their first starts today.

Seven players went into double figures for Ivy's, Victoria-area champions. They were Brian Sutherland-Brown (32), Dean Sawyer (20), Lorne Dakin (14), Ian Scott (12), Rick Mark (12) and John Albers (10). Mike Montgomery (22) and Fred Marshall (20) topped Nanaimo.

Duff McCaghey scored 24 points and Jim MacKay added 19 for Athletics, who led 35-34 at the half. Gerry Plester and Rod Francoeur both connected for 20 points for Chemainus.

Port Alberni and Courtenay were scheduled to meet at 12:30 today and contests were to continue until 9 p.m.

Vikings Win Pair

The host University of Victoria Vikings were the only double winners in Friday's opening rounds of the British Columbia invitational water polo tournament at UVic.

Vikings trounced Prince Rupert 17-1 and Terrace 14-7. In other games, Burnaby tripped Prince Rupert 16-4, Coquitlam edged Killarney 7-4 and Simon Fraser University defeated Washington's Huskies 9-6.

The three-day tournament winds up Sunday.

Athletes Ignore Controversy

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Controversy over politics at the first British Columbia Winter Games was partly resolved, as the second contingent of 1,100 athletes began competition today in their two-day segment of the Games.

Recreation critic Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) said Friday he is delighted he's been asked to help hand out medals at award ceremonies.

Earlier, Barnes had been less complimentary about the Games.

"It's a device whereby the government can come in at very little cost, get a lot of its friends to help it get a high profile; prepare everybody for accepting the goodwill of the government," he said in an interview.

The official Games colors of green and white were particularly upsetting to the NDP MLA, who noted that they are the colors the Social Credit government uses for its party.

"This is a form of subliminal brainwashing," he said.

Games general chairman Ron Butlin denied the charge, saying that the government had nothing to do with choosing the colors.

"They were chosen by Gorde Hunter of Victoria, who was commissioned to do a logo and colors," Butlin said.

Barnes also pointed to the nine Social Credit cabinet ministers and two MLAs who are appearing at one of the two official opening ceremonies, and are handing out medals.

"When they come in and blitz the area, do a lot of handshaking, get all of the appointments and all of the attention, I think it's just a blatant attempt to try and take advantage of unsuspecting people who think that they're doing one thing and find that the government is manipulating them," he said.

"Every MLA received a personal invitation to come to the Games," Butlin said. "I heard from only two who are not Social Credit members."

Butlin said that his office was told on Wednesday that Barnes would be coming to the Games, but was told nothing else.

"We would have been delighted to have him participate," he said. "He or (Opposition Leader Dave) Barrett could have been here presenting medals.

"I am disappointed other MLAs are not here; they should be visible here — it's their constituents competing."

For the athletes, however, the political bickering had little meaning and Vancouver Island contestants continued to haul in a big share of the medals.

Gymnast David Limber of Courtenay took the argo boys all-around title with firsts in rings, vault and horizontal bars, and a second on the parallel bars. His 43.49 total points gave him a slim margin in the under-14 division over Pat Patterson of Richmond, who had 42.07 and won the parallel bars.

Delaine Wilson of Victoria outpointed Susan Ross of Victoria 30.15 to 29.00 to win the all-around argo girls.

Delaine won the uneven bars and beam, was second in the vault and third in floor exercise. Susan won the vault, and was second in uneven bars, beam and floor exercise.

Stuart Jones of Sorrento came back in speed skating Friday to edge his nemesis of Thursday. Stuart won the boys 13-14 200 metres in 26.1 seconds. Shawn Leckie of Victoria, who had edged Stuart in the 300 and 600 metres Thursday, finished in 26.9 seconds.

Victoria's other gold medal-winners were Damaris Hurley in badminton and Susan Hathaway in diving. Bob Gallaugher's rink from the Playland Club, diver Robert-John Gill and sqash player Tony Hardy won silver medals while third-place bronze medals went to speedskaters Ernie Ferguson, Rick Sanderson and Debbie Bourgeois.

Cody's Injury Changes Card

Salvator Martino and Paddy Ryan defeated Igor Volkoff and The UFO in a one-fall battle that replaced the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Thursday at Memorial Arena.

The scheduled tag-team championship had to be postponed because Buffalo Bill Cody, Martino's partner, suffered a broken collarbone while the two were defending their title Monday in Vancouver.

In other bouts, Eric Froelich and Dave Kochen fought to a draw, Goldie Rogers outgrappled Bob Paterson and Joe Ventura defeated Ed Moretti.

Hockey Test For Collegians

The second annual challenge cup hockey game between University of Victoria and Camosun College will be played tonight at the Esquimalt Sports Centre, starting at 7:30.

UVic won the inaugural meeting 8-5.

Proceeds from the game will be used to further intramural hockey at both schools.

Impatience Trims Andy's Golf Lead

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Andy Bean quite obviously was struggling to say the right thing — or at least not say the wrong thing.

"Let's just say that some players are faster than others," is what he finally managed to say.

"We were waiting on every shot. Maybe I got a little impatient. After waiting so long, I guess I just lost my concentration a little. A couple of mental lapses."

And those two mental lapses, each resulting in a bogey, opened the gates for a host of challengers at the halfway point of the $250,000 Bay Hill Citrus golf tournament.

Bean was threatening to run away from the field and, at one point early in Friday's second round, had a five-shot lead. But a couple of bogeys coming home cut into the margin and he finished with a 69 and a two-shot lead at 133, nine strokes under par on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Country Club.

Host Palmer shot a 74 and, at 144, made the cut for the first time this year. He was tied with Lee Trevino, who had a 72.

PAIN LEAVES LOPEZ SWING

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Once again, Nancy Lopez was smiling, swinging painlessly and heading the Bent Tree golf tournament that launched her toward golf superstardom one year ago.

The 22-year-old Lopez, who captivated the golf world with her five-tournament winning streak last year, charged from five strokes back Friday to tie rookie Lori Garbacz and first-round leader Donna Horton White.

All were at 138 after two rounds of the $100,000 tournament that concludes Sunday with a $15,000 purse to the winner.

The field remained tight with Judy Rankin, Sally Little and Dale Lundquist one stroke back at 139 and JoAnn Prentice, Hollis Stacy, Pat Bradley and Murle Breer grouped at 140.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., shot her second consecutive 75 and was at 150. Dale Shaw of Victoria was two shots back of Sherk at 152 after firing a 76.

Lopez was seemingly free of the tendinitis pain that drove her to a ninth-place finish in the opening Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament two weeks ago at Miami. She had not competed since.

She said her arm felt fine as she drilled six birdies in a five-under-par 67 on the Bent Tree, a 6,106-yard layout considered one of the toughest on the LPGA tour. On the back nine, a particularly treacherous stretch, she birdied three of the first five holes.

Spartans Climb Into Third Spot

Claremont Spartans clipped Parkland Panthers 6-3 Friday to boost their playoff hopes in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Victory, coming on a pair of penalty goals by Dan Hammick, moved Spartans into third place in the standings, one point ahead of Oak Bay and three ahead of Parkland.

Stefan Rehm also booted a penalty goal to give Parkland a 3-0 half-time lead in a well-played game between two well-matched sides.

Westport House, home of the Marquess of Sligo

Ireland's Full of Splendid Mansions, Exotic Gardens

By SHEVAWN LYNAM

WESTPORT, Ireland — Some of the greatest views in the world are man-made and there are examples of them all over Ireland. They are composed of splendid mansions filled with artistic treasures and of landscaped, often exotic gardens. Thirty-four of them in the Republic of Ireland, members of HITHA (Historic Irish Tourist Houses and gardens Assocaiation), have opened their gates and doors to the public. Following the interest aroused during European Architectural Heritage Year in 1975, they have been attracting rising numbers of visitors ever since.

A short circular tour embracing about 150 miles, bordered by Westport, Sligo and Casterea and which can be started and restarted at any point, takes in three of these stately homes — Westport House, Lissadell and Clonalis House. All are inhabited by descendants of the original inhabitants.

Actually, if you journey from Westport to Castlera to Sligo and do not return from Sligo to Westport, the three can be taken in on a trip of less than 100 miles.

To begin with Westsport House, the home of the Marquess of Sligo; it combines the work of two leading 18th century architects — Cassels, a German, who built the east front in 1730, and James Wyatt, the great English architect, who completed the house around 1778. The setting on the shores of Clew Bay is sublime. Cassels useds the tidal waters to make an artifical lake to which stepslead down from classical terraces. And Wyatt's dining room is probably one of the finest Geogian rooms in existance.

The most interesting way from Westport to Lissadel, which lies eight miles north of Sligo, is through Ballina, across the Ox Mountains. The house was built of local limestone between 1830 and 1836 and is one of the finest neoclassical mansions. An avenue skirts Sligo Bay and in spring the ancient woods are a mass of primroses, forget-me-nots and bluebells.

Once inside, the visitor is struck by the massive grandeur of the design. The entrance hall blends in to a long pillared gallery hung with old masters. In the hall the great-grandfather of the present owners handed out rations during the famine after mortgaging the estate so as to feed the people for miles around. The records of the family's benevolence during the period are displayed in the billiard room.

The route from Sligo to Castlerea runs by the Curlew Hills, and the magnificent view from the summit over the lakes should not be missed. Below, suurounding Lough Key, is one of Ireland's foremost forest parks.

Clonalis House on the outskirts of Castlerea is the home of the O'Connors, direct descendants of the last two High Kings of Ireland and a succession of Kings of Connacht. The entrance hall, the mid-Victorian drawing room and Carolan's harp are all stimulating, but it is the portraits in the dining room that seem to strike visitors the most. This is probably the only place where it is possible to see a gallery of faces from the great Gaelic families.

But what sets Clonalis apart is the written word. Thousands of manuscripts cover six centuries. And among the 5,000 volumes in the library are facsimiles of such great Irish manuscripts as the Book of Armagh, and the Book of the Dun Cow with its description of the great bull's journey across Ireland to death in the Cooley Peninsula.

The tranquil County Roscommon landscape surroundings the house skirts a rich area where the Milesians are said to have settled, fleeing from drought and famine in northern Spain after their king, Brogan, had dreamed of an island to the north where it was forever green.

More information on these and other great mansions in Ireland may be obtained from the Irish Tourist Board, 69 Yonge Street (Suite 706), Toronto M5C — 1K3.

Music at Bath

A wide range of musical events are planned for the 1979 Bath Festival, which takes place in the historic city from May 18 to June 3. Among the artists who will be appearing are Vlado Perlmuter, the Stuttgart Piano Trio, the Melos ensemble, the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra, the BBC Northern Singers, Brian Burrows and William Glock and the Lindsay String Quartet.

Fishing in Ireland

NEW YORK — A new series of inclusive salmon and trout fishing vacations in Ireland is being launched this spring by Orbitair International, of 20 East 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Based at Newport House in Co. Mayo, the programs will operate in May and June, with weekly Saturday departures on Aer Lingus from New York and Chicago. The cost, appproximately $1,000 U.S., will include a full week's accommodation with all meals based on double occupancy, all fishing arrangements for six days (except rental of equipment or purchase of lures and flies), transportation to rivers and lakes, and transfers between Shannon Airport and Newport House.

Air fare is additional.

The program is based on six days of fishing — three days on lakes and three days at the rivers — but this is flexible.

Each day of fishing is organized by a full-time fishing manager.

Newport House is a charming country-inn type of hotel that overlooks the Newport River and has been operated by the same family of fishing devotees for more than 30 years. It enjoys a good reputation for its cuisine and has a notable wine cellar. It is also a good base for sightseeing in the west of Ireland.

Pleasant Custom in Hong Kong

Bird Walkers' Paradise

A pleasant custom of the bird walkers of Hong Kong is an early morning stroll through parks and streets, followed by a hearty breakfast at a Chinese traditional teahouse.

Bird walker are a common sight, particularly in the older residential districts of Hong Kong, lovingly carrying bird, cage and cover through the open spaces for a breath of fresh morning air.

One of their regular breakfast stops is the old-world Hing Wan bird restaurant, located in the Central business district of Hong Kong Island. There is provision for bird cages to be hung overhead, while breakfast is served to the bird walkers at small wooden tables. Breakfast is a delectable procession of dim sum delicacies — spring rolls, pork buns, shrimp dumplings — served with Chinese teas. Prices are nominal. One does not have to be a bird walker to try out the Hing Wan restaurant, but it helps to enjoy the sight and sounds of birds, as they do tend to dominate the setting.

Alternatively, tea and dim sum are served in several "early morning" restaurants without birds, including the Luk Kwok Hotel in Wanchai, the Dim Sum Kitchen and the Pearl City Restaurant in Causeway Bay.

Another good restaurant for a dim sum breakfast is the Luk Yu Teahouse in the Central District. The doors open at 7:30 a.m. on an establishment of ceiling fans, framed scrolls and mirrors, with a reputation as the grand old lady of Hong Kong teahouses. The Luk Yu teahouse, dating back more than 40 years, is named after a connoisseur of tea who lived in China during the Tang Dynasty (618-907 AD). It is widely told that the fragrant teas served at the Luk Yu have been left to ferment for many years before they are deemed good enough to be served.

Authentic Recipes

The menu is devoted to authentic recipes from the 18th and 19th centuries at the Wyvern, a new restaurant in London's Cumberland Hotel near Marble Arch.

Visitors can sample such dishes as Sirloin Steak and Wow Wow Sauce, which includes pickled walnuts, capers and port, and is an early 19th century recipe of Dr. William Kitchiner; sole and prawn sauce, devised by Francatelli, head cook to Queen Victoria in the first year of her marriage; or salmagundy, a recipe by Martha Bradley of Bath, who wrote The British Housewife in 1749.

EN GEV, ISRAEL: The 36th Annual En Gev Music Festival will take place at this kibbutz on the shores of the Sea of Galilee during passover and easter 1979. This music festival draws crowds from all over Israel and the world to hear international artists perform in the village's impressive auditorium. En Gev is easily reached from the Sea of Galilee resort city of Tiberias, by bus or by motor launch.

Shopping in India Different Experience

One of the joys travel is the thrill of bringing back mememtos of your trip, and for the shopper India is truly a paradise. If you're a discerning person, on the lookout for real values, buying Indian jewellery will be one of the wisest, and most pleasurable, investments you've ever made.

Shopping in India is an experience very different from the world of department stores and large plazas. It's quite unlike anything you've ever seen before. You may decide to buy a pair of bangles in Calcutta and watch the jeweller use old fashioned weights and scales to calculate the cost. Your major expense is the cost of the metal; for his workmanship the craftsman charges next to nothing. The variety of experiences is amazing. You may wander for hours through Bombay's Jhaveri Bazaar, the traditional silver market, making your way through throngs of jewellers displaying their wares on the sidewalk, and then enter a modern, air-conditioned jewellery store complete with television cameras policing the premises.

Ornaments have always been greatly prized and gold and precious stones of all kinds much in demand for personal adornment. In the past Indian women wore jewels on their foreheads and in the parting of their hair. They decked themselves with necklaces, noserings, bangles, armlets, earrings, anklets and belts of linked gold with hanging ropes of pearls.

Surviving pieces of ancient jewellery and representations of jewellery in painting show that the Indian jeweller attained very high standards in his art. Jewellery-making today has maintained the continuity of tradition and the high standards of the past. Indian jewellers are famous not only for their skill but for their sense of dedication toward their craft.

The jeweller considers certain object sacred and in making them follows a pattern that is almost ritualistic in nature. For instance, the "mangal-sutra", a special chain worn by the Hindu bride (the equivalent of a wedding ring) is treated with great reverance. The craftsman leaves the gold from which it is to be made in front of the appropriate deity for a night. He will fashion the gold into a wedding chain only the next morning, after a ceremonial bath and prayer. Where else in the world can you expect to see someone show such deep faith in tradition and so much genuine concern over another's happiness?

Many jewellers continue to use the tools handed down through successive generations. You'll rarely come across any machine-pressed jewellery in India. Most jewellery is handcrafted and since labour costs are so low you get more than full value for your money.

Jewellery shops like this are common in India. Most of the items sold reflect centuries of a finely honed craftsmanship, and this is particularly the case with silver work.

A wide variety of jewellery, both expensive and inexpensive, can be found across the country. It's hard to put a price on jewellery since it depends largely on the quality and quantity of the materials used. A pair of bangles, beautifully crafted in 22 karat gold, could range in price from $30-$500 depending on the amount of gold in making the bangles. Exquisitely designed bangles studded with rubies or diamonds can be had if you're willing to move up in price range.

The best place to buy gold jewellery is in south and north-east India. Kerala, Manglore and Bengal are famous for their intricate, traditionally designed jewellery. Their specialty is finely crafted bangles, necklaces, earrings, rings and pendants of plain gold. Craftsmen of the Madras region specialize in jewellery made of emeralds, rubies and diamonds worked into gold settings. The hallmark of jewellers from the north is their delicate designing, the blending of precious stones and pearls in gold settings. If you'd rather not buy ready-made jewellery, the silver or goldsmith, given a few days time, can make any ornament to your specifications.

Silver jewellery is found all over India. Silver filigree work which originated in Orissa is now available throughout the country. A visit to Bombay's Jhaveri Bazaar is a must for those who love silver. You'll see gorgeous rings, bangles, necklaces, chains, pendants, earrings, belts, cufflinks and anklets of pure silver. The anklets in particular are fascinating. They come in a variety of sizes and designs and cost as little as $10 a pair. Many anklets are set with tiny bells or with their hollows full of rattling pebbles.

The common practice of many Indians is to save money by investing in jewellery. Village and tribal women who cannot afford gold or gems load themselves with silver ornaments. The best heavy tribal jewellery comes from Orissa, Gujarat and Rajasthan.

The elegant "minakari" or enamel work of Jaipur is something you shouldn't miss. The reverse side of every piece of jewellery is covered with finely detailed enamel work so that ornaments look beautiful on both sides.

Precious stones can be purchased individually and then worked into settings of your choice. Hyderdad, Bombay and Maharashtra are famous for their pearls for just $50, or real pearls of the finest quality for $1,000.

Jaipur and Delhi are good places to shop for uncut semi-precious stones like amethysts, garnets and Indian jade. Strands of beads made from these stones are very inexpensive here and in Kashimir. If you're interested in emeralds and rubies it's Delhi and Jaipur again. Madras is the best place to buy diamonds.

You might consider purchasing a "nava-ratna" or nine gem ring when you're in India.It is commonly believed that each gem has a beneficial effect on a planet and the correct combination gems, put togother in an ring, with its nine "favorable" stones, is thought to be extremely lucky and powerful enough to ward off all evil. Bangles and necklaces set with these gems are also available.

Reservations System for Campers Popular

Campers moving south in the United States can easily guarantee a campsite along the way. North America's largest system of full-service campgrounds has a reservations system which enables travelers to call KOA Kampgrounds directly, using their Master Charge or Visa credit cards to guarantee reservations at any KOA.

The caller selects the location he wants to visit and calls the KOA in that area. After deciding on the type of campsite and other necessary information such as arrival time, the caller gives the campground the name and number of his credit card. The campground will hold the campsite all night long, but the camper will be billed for the cost of the campsite should he fail to arrive. Use of credit cards to guarantee reservations has been a popular customer service in the motel industry for years. And long distance transcontinental phone calls cost as little as 35c for two minutes during off-peak hours.

Travelers can get the phone numbers of KOA Kampgrounds from any campground directory or by calling the "Information" operator in the areas they are planning their stopovers.

According to a recent survey, KOA Kampground owners report an increase in the number of fall and winter campers. Of more than 840 full-service family campgrounds located throughout the U.S., Canada and Mexico, about 450 KOA Kampgrounds, or neary 50 per cent of the entire system, stay open all year and offer a number of attractions to late season travelers.

Campground owners in the northern states and Canadian provinces report an increasing registration of late fall campers and other travelers who wish to escape the heavy summer traffic patterns. Campgrounds in the "sun belt" report an increasing number of winter vacationers reserving sites to escape from the cold weather.

The increasing popularity of winter camping at KOAs in snow areas is due in part to the low cost of family camping as compared to other lodging rates.

A directory listing the KOA Kampgrounds that stay open all year is available free of charge, at any KOA. An Atlas with detailed road maps, travel information, and travel attraction bonus coupons is available for $2.00 by writing: KOA Atlas, Box 30558, Billings, Montana 59114.

Mail-Boat Treat in Nassau

NASSAU, Bahamas — For those who are seeking an adventuresome vacation in the winter or looking for an out-of-the-way retreat in a tropical atmosphere — hop aboard a mail boat in Nassau.

For as little as $10 a day (including room and board) you can cruise the azure-blue water of the Bahamas in a mail boat, snorkel on crystal clear reefs, or just gaze upon miles of perfect coral-sand beaches, many still free of footprints.

If a mail-boat cruise appeals to you, contact the dock master at Potters Cay, Nassau (the Bahamian capital), who will inform you which mail boats depart during the week (they leave daily). Some of the more picturesque islands you might want to visit (the Bahamas boasts 700 islands and 2,000 cays) are Andros, Bimini, Eleuthera and the Exuma Cays.

Here's a sketch of each island:

Andros, due west of Nassau, is a favourite of scuba divers or sedentary vacationers who want to get away from it all. One of the longest reefs in the world guards the coastline of Andros and offers a number of challenging diving areas.

Bimini, 50 miles off the Florida coast, is famous for its fishing. More than 500 world records have been broken in its waters, and Enrest Hemingway lived, fished and wrote here.

Eleuthera is the "breadbasket" of the Bahamas. Fruits and vegetables are grown here and shipped to market in Nassau. Quaint and photogenic villages such as Gregory Town, Hatcher Bay, the Current and Tarpum Bay dot the long pencil-thin island. Off the north tip of Eleuthera is Harbour Island, popular for its miles of pink sand beach.

The Exuma Cays in the southern half of the Bahamas archipelago, is home of the annual Out Island Regatta, an April event pitting Bahamian workboats against each other over a long weekend. Vacationers and Bahamians alike flock to this string of hundreds of largely uninhabited cays stretching more than 100 miles.

For more than 300 years the Bahamian mail boats have been the lifeline for the Out Islands (all the islands other than New Providence and Grand Bahama), as they carry supplies and passengers back and forth from Nassau to the islands.

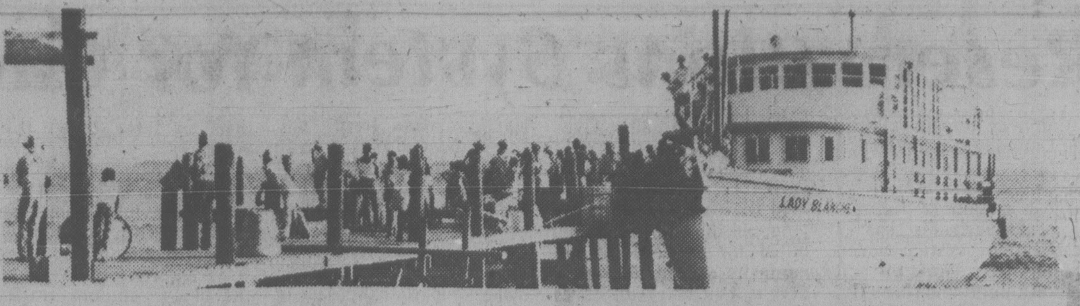
According to Margaret Heratey, a consultant carrying out a transportation study for the government, "the Bahamian mail-boat system is the only one of its kind in the Western Hemisphere, and for years was the only link between the Out Islands and the rest of the world."

Nonetheless, if you opt for a mail-boat cruise, be prepared for second- or third-class accommodation. For $10 a day you get a bunk and three square meals, but don't expect the amenities of a luxury liner. What's more, you may have to share a cabin (some have as many as six beds) with local islanders.

But if you're willing to rough it, here are some islands, ma)l boats and prices from Nassau to: Andros, one-day trip on the Miss Beverley, $10; Bimini Island, two days on the Captain Dean, $15; Eleuthera Island, two dauys on the Bahamas Daybreak, $15; and Exuma Cays, one day on the Lady Blanche, $12. Price includes meals and a bed.

The above islands or cays all have resort or guest-house accommodations, ranging from only $18 per day for an entire family on Staniel Cay in the Exumas, to $150 for a single room in a luxury hotel in Eleuthera.

Also, you may wish to island hop, staying on one island for a few days and then catching a mail boat to another island. Some vacationers, however, simply get "lost" (out of reach of telephone, television or other signs of modern civilization) on one island, and stay there for the duration of their vacation.



Bahama mail boats are the lifeline to the Out Islands

Adventurous Travel Can Still Be Inexpensive

Young adults by the thousands are adventurously seeing Europe in different ways from their parents. That's the new trend if not the beginning of a travel revolution, according to the experts in world travel. And they also indicate that there's as much potential for adventure in foreign travel these days as ever.

Furthermore, adventureous travel can still be inexpensive. For example, the camping-type of touring holiday — which is the method Europeans have perfected over the years in visiting neighbouring countries — keeps costs down and opportunities for meeting other people high.

This kind of "camping" is a far different thing from "roughing it in the wilderness" familiar to North Americans. In Europe, people who travel this way enjoy the convenience of "camping villages", complete not only with showers, flush saitation, electricity, restaurants and shops, but often discos, hairdressers, beaches or pools. And you pitch your own tent in a reserved spot. It's organized and economical.

For those travellers who want the economy of camping, plus the advantage of holiday arrangements in a package, there are now complete trips to the main tourist centres of Europe and even some which go east into Russia.

A typical camping trip — and one of the most popular with young-adult Canadians, according to the organizer, Goway Travel of Toronto — is a two-week journey starting from London or Amsterdam and going to such historic places as Heidelberg, Munich, Innsbruck, Venice, Florence, Lake Como, Lucerne and Paris.

Cost of the trip is about $365 in Canadian money, which includes ground transportation (in Europe) around the circuit back to the starting point, accommodation in two-person tents (or indoors at special stopovers), a variety of excursion to famous "sights", and the service of the trained holiday courier and driver.

Some of the excursion highlights of this trip include Paris' renowned Pigalle district, a Munich beer hall, and Amsterdam's swinging red light area. There are canal cruises in Venice and Amsterdam, art galleries and museums in Munich, Paris and Florence, as well as scenic drives along the Rhine Valley and Lake Como, all in the package cost.

In fact about the only thing that isn't included (apart from the return airfare between Canada and Europe) is meals, and these have been arranged economically as an extra. It works on the "kitty" plan, whereby each traveller in the group puts in a set amount (in the case of this two-week trip it's $40 Canadian) for breakfast and dinner each day.

This approach to food organization has been perfected over several years and it works.

Of course, each traveller has to supply his own sleeping bag and air mattress or pad throughout the trip.

Not every night is spent in a tent. During the two-week trip there's a break at Innsbruck where accommodation is in the comfortable hotel. Travellers also receive a free suitcase.

For those young adults (the Goway organizers say most of their customers are in the 20s age group) who have more time to invest in a holiday, there's a 23-day camping trip from Amsterdam north through Scandinavia and into Russia, returning via Poland and Germany. It's a route filled with exotic cities and places . . . and opportunities for adventure.

The price for this complete Goway package is listed at $585 Canadian, and it includes a long list of sightseeing items, such as visits to the Bolshoi Ballet and Checkpoint Charlie.

Two nights are spent under the hospitable roofs of small hotels in Helsinki and Warsaw. At other times accommodation is in tents.

Another European tenting trip offered by the same travel organizer is for four weeks. It covers the Rhine district and through the Alps into Italy, but also includes southern France and northern Spain. It's a more leisurely journey, too, with two-night stopovers in eight cities, and three stops with indoor accommodation.

Food kitty costs for this trip are set at $92 for breakfast and dinner throughout the holiday, while the basic price is $550 Canadian.

For young adults who want the greater comfort of hotel accommodation while travelling, there are economical trips available for them where the stress is still on freedom, adventure and low cost. For example, a two-week European journey touching most of the same areas as the two-week tenting trip, has been pakaged at a cost of $558 Canadian.

Continental breakfasts are included at each hotel, but for other meals the traveller makes his own arrangements, although estimates of meal costs for the holiday can be supplied by the organizer.

Another trip, also in hotels, is for 21 days and costs $782 Canadian. It concentrates a bit more on the Rhine, the Alpine districts, and Paris, with frequent two-day stopovers.

What these trips set out to prove to the young adult is that a European adventure holiday can be inexpensive.

It isn't hard to be alone together in The Bahamas. You can share a secluded ocean-side cottage; a soft white beach where there are no other footprints but yours; or a palm-fringed island which you can turn into your own Garden of Eden. Being in love is wonderful. Being in the Bahamas makes it even more so.

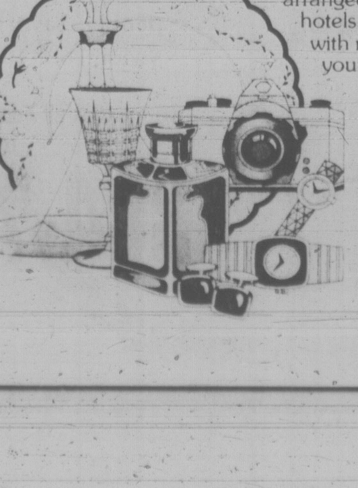
Love the bargains.
Shop Nassau's busy Bay Street or Freeport's famous International Bazaar for cameras and cardigans, crystal and china, perfumes and jewellery at much less than Canadian or even U.S. prices. Shop for gifts, shop for your home, shop for yourself, shop for fun. If you're away for seven days or more, you can take $150 worth of bargains back into Canada without paying a nickel in duty.
(It's better in The Bahamas)



Love the fun.
If it isn't hard to be alone in The Bahamas, it is hard to be lonely. There's tennis, golf and all kinds of water sports. There are cabarets and casinos, friendly pubs and lively discos. You can join the beach parties, cocktail parties and moonlight cruises arranged by many of the resort hotels. Or you can get together with new friends and plan your own.
(It's better in The Bahamas)

Love the sun.
Look forward to temperatures in the low 70's (21-23° C) and an ocean that may even be a degree or two warmer. In this country, we average eight hours of sunshine every day from early January till the end of April. And at this time of the year, there's hardly enough rain to dampen your swimsuit.

Park Shutting Door To Urban Trappings

By BRAD KNICKERBOCKER

SAN FRANCISCO — Yosemite National Park, one of the America's most popular natural playgrounds, is hoping to keep a welcome mat out for visitors while shutting the door on their automobiles and other urban trappings.

Under a plan just released by the National Park Service, man and his mechanized modes of travel and comfort are to be restricted so that air, water, and wildlife can remain as free and pure as possible.

Like many other national parks around the country, Yosemite in recent years has been nearly overwhelmed with crowds of visitors and the litter and pollution that follow. Some 2.5 million people visite Yosemite each year. Most come during the summer months, crowding into the narrow 7-square-mile Yosemite Valley.

Yosemite's new general management plan represents two goals that Park Service officials say apply to parks throughout the national system: increased public participation in planning and limitations on private automobiles.

Within the past two years, shuttle buses have begun replacing private autos along the south rim of Grand Canyon national Park, on some primitive roads at Mt. McKinley national Park in Alaska, and in the Shark Valley portion of the Florida Everglades.

Under the proposed plan for Yosemite, this concept is taken even further. Day visitors would have to leave their cars in central parking areas and travel by shuttle buses. On especially crowded days, visitors would be turned away once the parking areas were filled.

Only those with lodging or campsite reservations would be allowed to drive into the valley, although once there they would be encouraged to use the shuttle buses. The number of campsites would be increased by about 200, but motel and hotel facilities would be cut back by about the same number.

The ultimate goal under the plan is to ban private cars entirely from Yosemite Valley.

The Park Service wants to return Yosemite Village to a more natural site by removing some stores, the bank, barber and beauty shops, tennis courts, golf course, swimming pools, and skating rink.

Planning for Yosemite's future has been a long and involved process. So far, more than 63,000 individuals and groups have participated by attending workshops and public hearings or by filling out detailed workbooks. The information was analyzed by computer and studied by Park Service officials.

The result, according to Yosemite superintendent Leslie Arnberger, is a plan that reflects a general public desire to "restore the natural scene as nearly as possible."

Once a final plan is written, Congress will have to approve the cost, which could total as much as $85 million. Legislation also might be needed to limit private concessionaires who operate businesses inside national parks.

Cutting back on restaurants, hotels, and shops in Yosemite might remove the "reasonable opportunity" for a profit that concessionaires are guaranteed under present law, according to a Park Service study.

On Gardens and Pools

GARDENING
jack beastall

If it is a garden pool the wife has been wanting it would be a wise move to get started right away.

In every garden there is more than one spot a pool could occupy, but from the builder's point of view it should be in a spot that will entail the least effort, while a woman's idea of its location will be based on the aesthetic angle.

The first thing to be decided is the reason for adding a pool to the garden layout.

Water, moving or still, has been used from the time of the earlist records on gardening. It was the main feature in days when the only cultivated plants were grown for food or medicine.

Its role now is secondary to the ornamental plants which have been introduced into cultivation during the past 300 years, but the presence of water is always soothing, cooling, and pleasing to the eye.

If a pool is primarily for the growing of water plants, it will need to be fairly large, of any desired shape, and of a depth suitable to the plants it is to contain.

Water lilies, for instance, differ in their requirements. The species mostly commonly grown in home garden pools need no more than six inches of water above their crowns. They are usually planted in boxes of soil about eight inches deep, so the distance from the surface of the water to the bottom of the pool should be about fourteen inches.

Other species must have 18 to 20 inches of water over their crowns, and still others need 24 to 36 inches. It is important when buying to make sure the exact depth of water needed, otherwise they may not flower.

The addition of other water plants will necessitate a shelf or a pocket to hold about eight inches of soil, at a depth of about eight inches from the surface, or a total depth of sixteen inches.

On sloping ground the pool could be built on two levels, the higher pool having a fountain to supply water which passes over a waterfall to the lower pool, from where it is returned to the fountain with a small electric pump set under water.

A goldfish pool should be constructed shallow at one end and deep at the other, both ends having pockets suitable for water plants and the plants essential to fish life.

Pools in which water lilies are to be grown must be open to the sun for the greater part of the day. This is a factor to consider in their placement.

Less often seen is the reflecting pool. This is usually of formal design, rectangular and shallow. It is positioned to reflect some feature of the garden, such as a group of silver birch trunks reaching for the sky, or perhaps a huge craggy boulder. If a feature is not already present, it must be included in the plan and its position settled before construction starts.

Which pool to use will be determined by the place it is to occupy in the garden, and the main activities that will occupy the surrounding or adjacent area.

Beside a patio used for barbecues and entertaining, moving water is suggested. This can be supplied by a fountain or a waterfall circulated by a submerged pump.

If the patio is for rest and relaxation, a planted pool with or without fish might be more restful. While the sound of trickling water is restful, the movement before the eye can cause tension.

The reflecting pool may either accent the outdoor living area or be part of a secluded corner used for relaxation and contemplation.

With the purpose decided and the location fixed, next comes the construction. Proportion to surroundings is most important; many pools are unpleasing because this fact was ignored.

Rectangular and formal pools with straight sides may have to be drained in winter to prevent splitting as ice forms. Informal lily pools are built with gently sloping sides which allow expansion, as ice forms, without pressure on the pool sides.

If rock work is to be used for the pool it should be on top of a reinforced concrete base. Without this base cracks develop between the pieces of rock and the pool is a constant problem.

Bridges over the pool are out unless the pool is a replica in miniature of some well-known scene in which case the bridge will be small and detailed.

A bridge large enough and strong enough for walking over would require a pool to fill the entire back garden if everything is to remain in proportion.

For ideas on shapes and materials to use in construction, there are several books in the public libraries, one being Garden Pools, Fountains, and Waterfalls, published by Sunset magazine. It can be purchased at any book store or book department for a relativey low cost considering the wealth of ideas it contains.

Should it be that a sunken pool is out of the question, there are several types of plastic pools available — also plastic wall fountains, in which water drips through a series of basins placed one above the other on a wall, and circulated by a small pump.

There are also small kits containing a sheet of heavy plastic and an underwater pump for making miniature waterfalls.

A step stool or a few easily constructed shelves form the basic fixture which is covered with the sheet of plastic, then ornamented with rocks and rock plants. An old washtub at soil level holds the water and the pump, and a pliable tube runs to the top step.

The possibilities for using water in the garden are endless, bounded only by the imagination of the garden owners. And there is as much pleasure planning, building and planting, as there is in relaxing nearby when the job is finished.

★

Work For Week

Prick out indoor sowings of seeds when first pair of true leaves expand. Less root disturbance at this point.

Firm wallflowers and polyanthuses. Frost, rain or wind may have loosened the plants.

Sow outdoors, if soil suitable, broad beans and early peas.

Plan for hanging containers on balcony, patio or sundeck. Soil must be moisture-holding with humus. Line bottom of container with a sheet of plastic but not entirely up the sides. Air must reach the soil.

As Viburnum tinus (Laurustinus) flowers fade, prune to control size, or to make a denser shrub.

Finish whatever pruning is needed on deciduous (leaf-losing) trees.

Clean out dead wood from deciduous shrubs which flower in spring but do not cut any of the live portions at this time; flowers come on last year's growth.

Hansen Given Right to Peek in Files

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A classic "Catch 22" situation — a tangle of bureaucratic red tape with damned-if-you-do and damned-if-you-don't implications — has been resolved without a threatened court battle to the surprise of Canada's privacy commissioner.

Inger Hansen says she is "very pleased" with a guideline handed down by Deputy Attorney-General Roger Tasse that will allow her to do the job envisioned by Parliament when it passed the Canadian Human Rights Act nearly two years ago.

As the first privacy commissioner, it is Hansen's responsibility to help individual Canadians gain assurance that information about them in federal government files is accurate and fair.

She listens to appeals from individuals and acts as an intermediary when it appears their grievances may be justified.

However, Ottawa's top mandarins focused on some ambiguous fine print in the 1977 legislation to frustrate Hansen's efforts.

Hansen felt the act gave her the right to look at any federal government file on an individual — even files containing information that fell under the area of national security and other sensitive subjects exempted by the legislation. Although the act specifically states that individuals can not look at information about them in the exempted files, the commissioner felt she could.

Hansen, a 48-year-old lawyer, felt her right to access was "implicit" in the fact she was required to swear an oath of secrecy before taking up her four-year appointment.

The act did not specifically spell out that right and the commissioner announced earlier this year that she was ready to take the federal government to court to decide the issue.

If she couldn't look at the exempted files, Hansen maintained, how could she determine whether individuals' suspicions were justified that information in them were not in the exempted category.

"I have a duty to ask the courts to define my role and authority," she told an interviewer in mid-January.

The commissioner's threat of court action has caused the justice department, which prepares guidlines on such matters, to soften it's earlier stand.

Tasse, the ranking civil servant in the attorney-general's department, has come up with a formula that permits Hansen to be granted access to any file concerning a specific omplaint from an individual. But it rules out so-called "fishing expeditions" that would allow someone to ask Hansen to review, without evidence of injustice, all the files a particular department has on him or her.

HANSEN
. . . accepts offer

"I never had any intention of going on a wide search of files," Hansen said Thursday in an interview. "Before I agree to intercede on behalf of an individual, I want some reasonable justification."

A letter from Hansen to Tasse accepting the offer has been sent and the commissioner says she is "very happy with it."

The commissioner began accepting public complaints on March 1, 1978. By year-end, she had on file 580 complaints from 286 individuals complaining their rights under the Canadian Human Rights Act to personal data in government files were being denied.

Only a relative handful of the complaints have been resolved. In part, that was because of delays caused by the ambiguity of the act concerning whether Hansen could inspect files to determine whether information being denied to individuals fell under restrictions in the act.

No Drugs - Just Mice

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Niagara regional police thought they were on the trail of a drug bust when they read a cryptic newspaper announcement.

It said Reefer and Nimrod had been blessed with triplets weighing 15 grams.

Friends of a local couple whose pet mice had given birth were startled when police arrived at their door looking for narcotics. The friends had placed the ad as a surprise for the pet owners.

S.Sgt. Frank Parkhouse said police often follow up obliquely-worded newspaper ads, but this time, "we're satisfied it was legitimate."

Vernon Hospital Cuts Pay Hikes

VERNON (CP) — The Vernon Jubilee Hospital board of trustees has cut back 1979 salary increases for the hospital's administrator and two of his assistants following a wave of public protest.

Jerry Winters said Thursday the board reviewed eight per cent increases which would have increased administrator Bob Ferguson's annual salary to $53,000 from $48,000 and his assistants' salaries to $33,000.

After reviewing salaries at hospitals of equal size, said Winters, the board awarded Ferguson a 1.3-per-cent increase, raising his salary to $48,7000 and his assistants' rate by 1.9 per cent for a new salary of $31,000 annually from $30,400.

The board did not change eight-per-cent increases for 17 other management staff.

Hospital administrative staff oversee a $10 million annual budget, a staff of 700 and 300 beds at hospitals in Vernon, Armstrong and Enderby. The hospital also supplies administrative support for two long-term care facilities.

Who puts it back in?

Every year in B.C. countless bridges are carried away by torrential rain, rivers, mud, snow and rockslides. Usually these bridges are a vital link to things like hospitals, schools, homes and jobs.

Just the building of a bridge in the beginning is hard enough. But having to replace it—usually under difficult weather conditions—is even harder.

But somehow it always seems to get done.

Thanks to the people who work for the B.C. Ministry of Highways. People like the surveyors. The labourers. The carpenters. The asphalt crews. The flag people. All working as a team to keep our roads open.

These people are only a few of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.

At all kinds of jobs.

Under all kinds of working conditions.

All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today. And that's something to be proud of.

Ottawa Asks for Extra $346M

OTTAWA (CP) — The government asked Parliament Friday for authority to spend another $346 million for unexpected expenses, bringing total spending estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31 to $50.1 billion.

But the government says that more than $1.8 billion of the money will not actually be spent and that the spending target of $48.3 billion for the year will be met. About $1.3 billion allocated to departments will "lapse" — not be spent — and the government will get back $574 million in loan repayments.

The request is contained in supplementary estimates in which the government makes requests for money for expenses not foreseen when main spending estimates were tabled more than a year ago.

Biggest single item in the new request is an extra $125 million for payments on the national debt because of higher interest rates. That brings total estimated costs of interest on the national debt in 1979-80 to $7 billion.

The federal government now owes about $80 billion borrowed to finance spending deficits in previous years and this will rise to more than $90 billion over the next fiscal year.

Estimtes of the cost of carrying the national debt next year are $8.3 billion.

The government is also asking for another $46 million for the agriculture department — bringing total department spending to $778 million — mostly for agriculture stabilization payments.

There is another $43 million requested for guaranteed income supplements, which were increased $20 in January along with cost-of-living increases. More money was also needed for the old age security pension which is also tied to the cost of living.

The defence department will receive $25 million more to cover price increases and there is another $32 million for contributions to NATO. That will bring total defence department spending to $4.2 billion.

Free Inspections Urged Of Aluminum Wiring

TORONTO (UPC) — The Royal Commission on Aluminum Wiring recommended Friday the Ontario goverment offer free wiring inspections for all homes with aluminum wiring, despite findings which show the material safe to use.

In a 320-page report containing 43 recommendations, the commission said almost two years of research showed little evidence residential fires could be traced to aluminum wiring.

Commission chairman Dr. J. Tuzo Wilson said less than 10 percent of fires investigated in Ontario were due to electrical causes of any kind.

"And only a fraction of these can possibly be due to aluminum wiring. "Nevertheless the report recommends a number of safeguards to reduce hazards of all types," Wilson said.

The commission suggested a province-wide hotline to answer citizen inquiries on wiring safety procedures and standards, and guidelines requiring contractors to provide a wiring diagram for new homes.

The commission was established in 1977 following a rash of complaints from citizens who said aluminum wiring had started electrical fires in their homes.

Aluminum wiring came into general use in the late 1960s and is now used in more than 450,000 Canadian homes, according to estimates by the commission.

In 58 hearings and testimony by more than 80 witnesses plus several site inspections, the commission found residential fires stemmed from a variety of causes, Wilson said.

The actual causes included over-fusing, inadequate workmanship leading in some cases to loose connections, and the introduction of steel and zinc-plated screws and push-in connections in electrical devices.

Eclipse Damaged Eye Of Ontario Youth, 16

DRYDEN, Ont. (CP) — A 16-year-old boy in this northwestern Ontario town has suffered extensive eye damage after watching Monday's solar eclipse without any eye protection.

Local optometrist, Dr. David Adams, said Friday the unidentified high school student has only 10 per cent clear vision after viewing the entire eclipse.

Comparing the boy's vision to what is normal, Dr. Adams noted the boy must be 90 per cent closer to see a letter on an eye chart than someone with normal vision.

He added the boy's vision may improve slightly but most of the damage is permanent.

Set Sights Higher: Clark

MONTREAL (UPC) — Conservative Leader Joe Clark says the country has an "unparalleled potential for growth" yet the federal government is telling Canadians to lower their expectations.

"My view is that we should raise them, raise our expectations," Clark told a meeting of the Canadian Construction Association Friday.

"Despite two federal budgets, the economy last year grew by only 3.4 percent and the last quarter by only 2 percent," Clark said. "And all the forecasts are that 1979 won't be much better.

"Slow growth guarantees a high deficit and a low Canadian dollar," he said. "It sentences a million Canadians to unemployment . . . and half of them are under 25."

Canada, he said, "has the worst record of unemployment in the western world, worse than Britain or France or Germany — every other nation in the west has been able to do better."

Apart from the economic cost of having to pay out $4 billion yearly in unemployment insurance, Clark said, there were further costs both in terms of the bitterness engendered among persons unable to find work and in political terms.

He noted that Quebec and the Maritime provinces had a high concentration of unemployment.

Coast to coast newspaper advertising sells the most

Papers, Radio, TV 'Drugs'

TORONTO (CP) — Marshall McLuhan says that newspapers, radio and television are types of drugs, each with its own addictive properties.

McLuhan said in an interview in The Journal, the monthly publication of the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario, that much of contemporary music is a type of aspirin.

Television wipes out the identity of viewers and some people panic when deprived of newspapers, McLuhan said.

Radio is a "kind of inner trip, a kind of fantasy world," said McLuhan, director of the University of Toronto's centre for culture and technology.

He said the radio age increased sensitivity of the ears. People who relate to each other more by talking than by reading find alcohol too potent.

". . . . Whereas the visual man, the literate man is, as we say, a gentleman who knows how to carry his liquor.

McLuhan described the watching of television as the main drug trip which has resulted in people losing their identity.

"It is an alienating experience. You wouldn't call watching television doing something. Something's being done to you, it's like going to a sauna bath.

"Print, too, is a very heavy drug. People who have been deprived of it get terribly panicky.

"People who have been in prison camps have talked about how, whenever they did manage to get just a few lines of printed words, it was passed around the whole camp, just for the sake of being able to see some words. It would be like a precious bit of food.

"I think a lot of our feeling about the news has some of that quality. You know, you put your head in a newspaper and you feel at home."

But it's not because there is anything substantial in the newspapers that people have this craving.

McLuhan said the killings and mass suicides in Jonestown in Guyana are the ultimate pushing of the television experience.

"Those people were all Americans, they grew up in the San Francisco area, they had undergone the TV generation experience completely. They lost their identity, (and) tried to recover it through a group.

And what do people do about a loss of identity. McLuhan said some jog — to prove they have a body.

School TV Lousy, Says CBC

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has been doing a lousy job of making its programs available to schools to get children interested in Canadian culture, a senior CBC official admitted Friday.

Peter Herrndorf, assistant general-manager of CBC's English-language division, told a seminar on education there is not enough money to keep successful programs in circulation on the air or in schools.

"We've done a lousy job, a poor job, a horrible job of making good programs available to schools and repeating good programs for the general audience," he said.

He told the seminar on teaching in the 1980s that Canada is flooded with U.S. programs that make some aspects of American culture far more familiar to Canadian children than their own society.

But when asked why there is a lack of good artistic and documentary programs available for loan to schools, Herrndorf replied that the money cannot be found.

The XT connection eliminates repeated hydraulic failures

Caterpillar XT-3 and XT-5 hoses with reusable couplings are a matched performance team. They eliminate repeated hydraulic failures and work trouble free on your toughest hydraulic applications. To ensure that you'll save on maintenance costs through longer hose working life, every inch of XT-3 and XT-5 hose is proof-tested at twice the rated working pressure. And to reduce your maintenance costs even further, use Caterpillar XT-3/5 reusable couplings.

Because they can be reused as many as 20 times, they're good for the life of most machines using hydraulics. Last year, Finning sold more than 45 miles of XT-3 and XT-5 hydraulic hose, and that in itself says much about the benefits of these superior Cat products.

Want to save money on your hydraulic systems? Use Caterpillar XT-3 and XT-5 hose and reusable couplings, a matched performance team from Finning. Available at more than 20 locations in British Columbia, the Yukon and the Mackenzie Valley, NWT.

Childless Feel Most Concern About TV Harm

WASHINGTON (WP) — More than half the American adult population feels that watching television is the cause of serious problems for children.

Strikingly, however, the people who express the most concern are either childless or parents whose children have passed the age at which most people would consider them impressionable, according to the findings of a national Washington Post poll.

Parents of children under the age of 16 are concerned about the effects of TV on youngsters, of course — but not quite as concerned as everyone else seems to be.

The Post poll dealt with three aspects of concern: TV content, the amount of time spent watching and the effect of TV advertising on children. The 1,693 people interviewed were asked whether they felt eaoh aspect represented "a serious problem," "a minor problem," or whether it was "not a problem at all."

A total of 63 per cent said they felt "the question of children seeing things they shouldn't see" was a serious problem; 32 per cent felt it was a minor problem and 12 per cent said it was not a problem. Among parents of children 15 or younger, 45 percent felt it was a serious problem; 38 per cent said it was a minor problem and 15 per cent said it was not a problem.

When asked how great a problem "TV keeping children away from doing other things they should be doing" was, 57 per cent said they felt it was a serious problem, 28 per cent a minor problem, and 12 per cent said it was not a problem at all.

Among parents of children 15 or younger, however, 49 per cent felt it was a serious problem, 29 per cent a minor problem, and 20 per cent said it was not a problem at all.

Somewhat less concern was expessed over "the effect of TV advertising on children." Thirty-eight per cent of all those interviewed said it was a serious problem, 35 per cent said it was a minor problem, and 22 per cent said it was not a problem at all.

Again, parents of children 15 or younger seemed slightly less concerned. Among them, 34 per cent said the effect of commercials on children was a serious problem; 39 per cent said it was a minor problem, and 26 per cent said it was not a problem at all.

Fishermen Net a Sub

PARIS (AP) — The fishing vessel La Sablaise made a surprise catch Thursday its nets became entangled with the 79-metre-long French submarine Marsouin, Maritime officials said. They said the fishermen had to cut their nets to free the submarine, which was on manoeuvres in the Bay of Biscay off southwest France.

Ads Increasingly Annoy Viewers: Poll

By BARRY SUSSMAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Public resentment of television commercials has grown steadily in the United States over the past 18 years, a Washington Post national poll of attitudes toward television suggests.

Dislike of commercials is now so widespread and deep, the poll suggests, that although some viewers have switched to public TV, others have simply begun turning off their TV sets more and more.

More than one-third of those interviewed in the Post poll said they would be willing to pay a small amount yearly just to have television without commercials. That proportion — 36 per cent — translates into more than 50 million people out of an adult population of 150 million.

It represents an increase of 50 per cent since 1960, when, in a landmark poll of attitudes toward TV, 24 per cent of those interviewed said they would pay to have television free of commercials.

The implication is that new TV recorders and video cassettes or discs — are made to order for those most offended by TV commercials. As a group, those viewers are somewhat more affluent than the rest of the population and more able to afford the equipment. The poll shows that while they dislike commercials intensely, they enjoy TV entertainment as much as the rest of the population does.

Great numbers of people have always objected to one aspect or another of TV commercials. What is different today is that those objections seem to have spread and hardened over the years. The 1960 poll, for example, asked people whether they agreed or disagreed with this statement:

"Commercials are ordinarily in poor taste and very annoying."

Forty per cent agreed. The same question was asked in another poll in 1970, and 43 per cent agreed. In the Post poll, conducted at the end of October, 54 per cent agreed, over-all. Among those who said they would pay to be rid of commercials, 70 per cent agreed.

Similar patterns emerge in response to othe questions. In 1960 and 1970, more than 60 per cent of those interviewed said they felt that most TV commercials were too long. Since then, individual commercials have tended to become much shorter, with the frequent one-minute spots of earlier years being replaced by many 15-or 30-second advertising breaks.

Yet the Post survey still found 58 per cent of those interviewed agreeing with the statement that most commercials are too long. Among those who said they would pay to have commercials dropped, 73 per cent said they are too long.

While TV officials insist that commercials are not played at volumes louder than other material, most viewers feel otherwise. A total of 56 per cent in the Post poll agreed with the statement that "TV commercials are too loud."

One thing commercials have accomplished, the poll suggests, is thebuilding of a strong skepticism in the public. A "caveat emptor" sign lights up when a commercial comes on the screen.

"Do you find that TV commercials are generally accurate or inacurate in the way they describe products?" the Post poll asked.

Thirty-one per cent of those interviewed said commercials were accurate, 63 percent said they were inaccurate and 6 per cent volunteered no opinion.

The great majority of those who thought they were generally accurate didn't think they were all that accurate, though, with only 6 per cent labelling them "very accurate."

Despite the growing resentment of commercials, a majority of people — albeit a declining majority — still feel that commercials "are a fair price to pay for the entertainment you get."

In 1960, 75 per cent of those interviewed agreed with the statement; in 1970, 70 per cent agreed with it. In the 1978 Post poll, 67 per cent agreed. (Even 58 per cent of those who said they would pay to be rid of commercials said they agreed.)

No Reason For Decline In Strokes

BOSTON (UPI) — Strokes, North America's third largest killer behind heart attacks and cancer, appear to have declined significantly since 1945, according to a Mayo Clinic study published Friday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Over-all rates of stroke have decreased by 45 percent, according to Dr. Jack P. Whisnant, principal investigator of a research team at the Rochester, Minn., clinic.

"The striking thing is this is one of the chronic diseases which badly incapcitates some patients, which is clearly decreasing in new cases," Whisnant said in an interview.

Although researchers were unable to pin down the exact cause, they said improved health care methods and changes in smoking and dietary habits may be responsible.

Whisnant noted that risk factors related to the occurrence of stroke can now be identified. "And if we pay attention to them and get treatment, now we have evidence that it pays off in terms of stroke prevention," he said.

Mayo physicians studied more than 1,800 Rochester-area cases of stroke occurring between 1945 and 1974. They examined the occurrence of several major types of stroke found in all major age groups and both sexes.

Stroke — a disability of the nervous system caused by the loss of blood supply to the brain — is often caused by high blood pressure, arterial disease or a combination of both.

Whisnant said drugs that combat high blood pressure may in part be responsible for the drop, but not the major cause.

"A lot of cases of stroke are related to cardiac problems, and the more satisfactory treatment of these may be a factor," he said.

"We're also preventing some stroke by better treatment (of mild forms of stroke known as TIA), but we don't have any scientific evidence to state which is the most critical factor that has caused the decline."

Other factors that may have contributed to the improving picture are the 1964 Surgeon General's report on the health hazards of smoking and the American Heart Association announcement the same year calling for decreased intake of saturated fats and cholestrol.

"We think that (smoking) certainly could play a role," Whisnant said, "but a smoking decrease occurred in men and not in women — and stroke has declined faster in women.

Whatever the cause of the overall reduction, Whisnant said, the elderly have benefited more than the younger age groups. Individuals over 80 experienced a decline of 60 percent.

Killer Spill Remains A Mystery

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Coast Guard says it will be almost impossible to determine the source of oil that killed or harmed more than 300 sea birds on the Oregon and Washington coasts.

The Coast Guard and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said there is uncertainty over how many oil spills were involved.

Oil that washed ashore Wednesday at Ocean City, Wash., was cleaned up Thursday. About eight 55-gallon barrels of oil-soaked debris was removed from the beaches.

U.S. Scientists Exert Pressure

WASHINGTON (WP) — An informal group of well-known American scientists revealed this week that more than 2,400 colleagues have signed personal pledges to end or restrict their co-operation with Soviet scientists until the Soviet Union releases two famous political dissidents from prison.

This unexpected announcement — a surprise to the state department and the National Academy of Sciences — represents an escalation of organized protest by U.S. scientists against Soviet harassment of dissident academics.

Several officals of scientific organizations said the new protest could have a measurable effect on the level of Soviet-American scientific co-operation, an area in which Soviet authorities have shown unusual sensitivity in the past.

The two dissidents to whom the 2,400 Americans have lent their support are Anatoliy Scharansky and Yuri Orlov.

Scharansky, 31, was sentenced in July to 13 years at hard labor for "high treason in the form of espionage."

Orlov, 55, the highest-ranking scientist sentenced to prison in the Soviet Union since Stalin's time, is a high energy physicist and former member of the Armenian academy of sciences. He was sentenced last May to seven years at hard labor and five years of "internal exile" on charges of anti-Soviet activity.

The new U.S. group, which revealed its existence publicly for the first time this week, is called "Scientists for Orlov and Scharansky" (SOS). Its supporters include 13 Nobel Laureates, and 113 members of the 1,100-member National Academy of Sciences.

Prof. Paul Flory of Stanford University, a Nobel Prize winner in chemistry, told a press conference that several international meetings have been cancelled "and many others have suffered from greatly reduced attendance" because of the number of Americans that have signed two SOS petitions.

Voyager Sends Space-Boom Sounds

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The far-ranging Voyager 1 spacecraft, which already has produced spectacular pictures of Jupiter, is also transmitting the eerie whistling and popping sounds of space.

The sounds heard from 660 million kilometres away are essentially sonic booms made by tiny particles racing from Jupiter toward the sun, said Frederick Scarf of TRW Stystems, who heads the plasma wave experiment for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration mission.

The space tapes included sounds like squealing car tires, wind whistling through a tunnel and popping popcorn. Deep, artillery-like booms were heard periodically as the spacecraft and its instruments added their noises.

Scarf said the major sounds heard so far involved the solar wind — a stream of electrically charged particles, called plasma, that the sun continually flings in all directions. The wind travels deep into the solar system at speeds of perhaps 400 kilometres a second.

Jupiter's magnetic field acts as a shield that deflects the solar wind and slows it down, producing a shock wave of sorts called a bow shock.

"The same processes also accelerate a small number of electrons and protons (subatomic particles in the plasma) to energies that are quite high," Scarf said. "This causes some of them to go faster than the solar wind toward the planet," where many are bounced back into the wind at supersonic speeds.

As they go crashing back into the solar wind, they produce sonic booms — shock waves that ripple through the plasma and are heard by Voyager.

"The entire region well upstream from Jupiter is filled with these upstreaming particles and the waves they radiate," Scarf said.

He said the recordings are made with "kind of a microphone on Voyager that is capable of listening to the sounds around the spacecraft."

"We hope to hear many of the other (audible) phenomena that develop around Jupiter in the next few days," he said.

Chanel Style Old but New

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

PARIS — Well, there they were. The calf-high boots, the above-the-knee hemlines, the no-waistline shapes. Instead of being mostly in white, they now combined primary colors — blue, red and yellow — with white, so they looked even brighter. The models wore matching ribbons in their hair — one over their bangs, two in their ponytails — and tried valiantly, but somehow the effort didn't jell. There were a couple of good pants, one yellow and one in blue (Courreges pioneered trouser fashions as well as miniskirts), but the designer proved that, in fashion, you can't always go home again.

Emanuel Ungaro turned the time machine back to the early part of the century and British music hall costumes, according to the English contingent at his show.

In some ways, the Chanel collection was the most contemporary of all. The lady's hold on fashion goes back to the First World War. Her squarish but soft boxy jackets and her jersey dresses have become 20th-century classics. Since her death in 1971, her assistants have been able to carry on her work without missing a beat.

Jean Cazaubon and Yvonne Dudel, the assistants, don't try to change things very much, which makes everyone feel very comfortable.

They don't have to. The easy fit, uncinched waistlines and unpadded shoulders that characterized Chanel suits through the years have endured. They pleased the audience today as much as they ever did.

The Chanel style has weathered the vicissitudes of fashion better than any other designer's work you can think of. She set out, at the beginning of the modern era, to free women from constricting, figure-distorting clothes. She did her job so well that her styles look far more contemporary than a lot of more modern vintage.

Baggy T-Shirt Big Winner

By NINA S. HYDE
Washington Post

It is a look that is bound to grow on you, this supersize T-shirt by James Berry.

In St. Tropez they wear them over bikinis, monokinis or nothing at all.

Berry, 33, is an artist and photographer who was going to the Cannes Film Festival last year to photograph for a book and brought along 100 of his super-size T-shirts silk-screened with a director's chair and an umbrella. Those hundred sold in a couple of days, says Berry, who since then has sold 30,000 to 40,000 more in Europe and England.

His inspiration for the huge, one-size-only shirt was the Egyptian gallabia, he says. The appeal is comfort, wit and versatility. "Stand in front of a mirror," Berry says, "and you can shape them into any kind of dress you want."

He has seen his fantasy costume worn as a dress, knotted at the hem, belted or equipped with a draw-string, worn "straples" (by pulling the neckhole over the head and shoulder) and even worn upside down — as shorts. Men wear them too.

Berry — who won an award at the Cannes festival for the script he wrote at age 19 for the movie Pilgrimage — made the gift scarves for the opening of the cosume exhibitions at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. It's his private salute to Diana Vreeland, special consultant to those shows, who "is a great supporter of fashion as an art" says Berry. For the most recent show — Diaghilev: Costumes and Designs of the Ballets Russes — he handmade 500 ostrich-plume fans.

His designs are always hand-screened. "I've tried them machine made and there is no comparison," Berry says. "And besides, I want to encourage the art of handscreening." His subject matter is often topical. The first T-shirt (in normal sizes) was inspired by Kahoutek — with a silver comet across the front.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I have written an open letter to my husband's boss. Because I'm sure many other wives could have written it, I hope you will print it in your column.

Dear Mr. Boss:

I want to protest a very irritating habit you have: calling my husband at home at all hours and on weekends to discuss business with him.

If it were urgent, I wouldn't mind, but it is obvious that you only want to hear yourself think out loud and need my husband as a sounding board. (This was very flattering to him — at first. Them he found out that you do the same thing with your other employees.)

I work, too, and when we get home, we look forward to having a quiet dnner and a relaxing evening together or with friends. But we hardly get settled in before you phone from the office or your car, and proceed to tie my husband up for half an hour to an hour.

You have interrupted bridge games, important discussions, and intruded on too many other things to mention here. You have called just as we were leaving for a social engagement, causing us to be embarrassingly late many times.

You are known to be a workaholic. Evenings and holidays are all the same to you. Just because your work is your whole life, don't assume that your employees have nothing else in their lives but their jobs.

My husband is conscientious and no clock watcher, but his time at home is his own, and you have no right to expect him to be on call for business conversations 24 hours a day.

I have asked my husband to talk to you — man to man — but he's afraid you might fire him, and that would be a hardship for our family at this time.

I'm not signing my name, but if this applies to you, please change your ways. You are fair and generous and kind, and if it weren't for this one fault, you would be a terrific boss. — THE WIFE OF YOUR EMPLOYEE

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to complain about barbers who charge bald-headed men and those with full heads of hair the same price for haircuts. She thought the baldies should pay half price.

You replied, "so how much should the barber charge the man with long hair that requires twice as much time for a haircut? Sorry, it all evens out. Anyone who feels that the trimming he's getting isn't worth the trimming he'w getting should stay out of barber shops."

Gotcha, Abby! At my barber shop, in addition to the already inflated prices, they charge a minimum of $2 extra for long hair. And no discounts for baldies. — M.B.M.

DEAR M.B.M.: Your barber shop sounds like a clip joint.

Battery Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — Parents should take special care in storing the tiny batteries used in cameras, hearing aids and certain toys, says Warren Allmand, consumer and corporate affairs minister.

"The use of these batteries has increased substantially in the last few years, and the Canadian Pediatric Society informs me they are easily swallowed by children," he said.

Some of the batteries contain potassium hydroxide or other dangerous chemicals which can cause considerable physical damage if they leak in the gastrointestinal tract.

Allmand said it would be unreasonable to ban the sale of the batteries because they are a needed product and cautionary labels are also unpractical because the batteries are so small.

Free for the Asking

The appreciation of needlepoint has been revived during the last decade or so.

The leaflet Needlepoint will convince you that if you follow its easy instruction, you too can become a needlepoint expert.

Canvas can be bought in various forms: by the yard, in individual pieces with a design, or with the centre design already worked. Furthermore, you will find illustration of the basic needlepoint stitches: Continental Stitch to Half—Cross Stitch. Although it requires more yarn, the result is smoother.

Another leaflet, Needlepoint Stretching and Mounting, explains that all you need for this procedure, besides your completed canvas, is a greenback board, a clean towel placed on an ironing board, a steam iron, dressmaker pins with rounded heads, a stapler and a frame which should be ½ cm. larger than the greenback board.

If you don't want to use a frame, you can hang the needlepoint work after mounting. However, framing does improve the appearance, secures the shape of the picture and prevents warping. Usually no glass is used in needlepoint frames.

With your request for the leaflets, please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Public Relations Department, Patons and Baldwins (Canada) Ltd., 1001 Roselawn Ave., Toronto, Ont. M6B 1B8.

Please indicate your postal code and allow it at least two to three weeks for delivery.

Brush Away that Stain Problem

By A. J. HAND

Q. We have a brick home and a problem. The bricks under our windows are stained with a white deposit. My neighbor says this is efflorescence, but I think it is caused by the white paint on our window trim. Who is right and what do I do to correct the problem? — F.D.

A. I'd say you are right. If the problem were efflorescence (leaching of salts contained in the brick or mortar) it would probably affect the whole house, not just the area under the windows.

Solution? First, repaint your windows with a non-chalking paint. The paint now on the windows is surely one of the self-cleaning paints, a product formulated to clean itself by chalking or slowly washing away. Your paint store should be able to help you select a good non-chalking paint to put over the old paint. Scrub the old paint with soap and water, then rinse well before painting. Otherwise the new paint may not stick well.

Once you repaint your windows, the chalking on your bricks may slowly fade away. You can speed the process by scrubbing. First try a stiff brush and plain water. If that doesn't work fast enough, use scouring powder. Be sure to thoroughly soak the area to be cleaned before scrubbing. Rinse well afterwards.

Q. Last winter I attached plastic sheets over all of our windows to block out air infiltration. I used masking tape to fasten the sheets to the wood trim. Now I can't remove the masking tape. Can you tell me what to do to remove the tape? — H.B.H.

A. I've had good luck soaking old dried-on masking tape with Weldwood Cleaner and Thinner. It's a solvent designd to thin and remove contact cements. Put some on the tape and let it soak for a few minutes. It should soften the adhesive enough to let you pull the tape free. If the tape is really stubborn, two or three soaks may be required. This solvent — sold at hardware stores — is safe on most wood finishes, but you might want to test it just to be sure.

Q. We added electric heat to our enclosed porch so we could enjoy it year around. But so much air comes in through our jalousie windows that the room is too cold and drafty. Is there a solution short of replacing the jalousies with a more air-tight type of window? — J.R.

A. Jalousies are about the least weathertight windows you can buy. But you can seal them to some extent with a special type of weatherstripping. It's a clear vinyl channel that slips onto the edges of the individual glass panes. It's nearly invisible, yet provides a good seal at the glass-to-glass joints.

Forgotten in History

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Women are an anonymous subculture in history because men have defined history in terms that dismiss women, a University of Calgary historian said Tuesday.

Elaine Silverman said history is masculine by definition, recognizing only political or military influence.

Most women work outside the scope of power and as result, they have no history according to the masculine definition of historical influence, she said.

Many Reasons for Biopsies

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Since my wife was told she should have a biopsy she has been in a state of panic. She has a small growth on her cheekbone and, of course, she is sure it is cancer. She refuses to have the biopsy done because she is certain of the outcome. I can't drive any sense into her head. I wish you could help me. — Mr. J.O.

Dear Mr. O.:

Fear is an irrational disease. Many people do themselves a great injustice by living in a state of fear, giving up all the joys of living because they are so sure that they have an incurable disease. It is pathetic to see good lives wasted, especially when they later learn that there was no justification for their uncontrollable fear.

Many patients react as your wife does to the word biopsy and immediately associate it with cancer. This is a false and misleading concept.

Biopsy is simply the removal of a small piece of tissue for meticulous study under the microscope, in order to positively identify the tissue and aid in the diagnosis.

The tissue that is removed is sent to a laboratory where it is embedded in a paraffin block. It is then cut into sections so thin that they are barely visible. After the sections are stained, a pathologist (a specialist in tissue study), examines the cells, classifies the tissue and makes recommendations to the doctor for treatment.

Biopsies are performed for many other reasons than cancer investigation. The fact that the doctor has not actively pursued biopsy study or surgical removal of the growth should give your wife the added assurance that he feels she does not have a serious problem.

Now that she knows what a biopsy is, and how routinely it is done, she should have this made and gain relief from her unnecessary anxiety.

Two of my daughter's friends take water pills for reducing. Now, my daughter wants us to get them for her. I don't understand how other mothers can be so absurd as to permit this. Do you agree? — Mrs. G.H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

I most certainly do agree. Unless diuretics (water pills) are given for very specific medical conditions, it is silly to take them as a means of dieting.

Sure, people who take them can lose weight . . . temporarily. But that weight loss is due to the loss of fluids which quickly is replaced when any fluid is taken. So, you see, they're really kidding themselves. Water pills cannot substitute for a sensible, well-regulated low calorie diet.

Not only is this a ridiculous way to try to lose weight, there are also some inherent dangers to the indiscriminate use of water pills. With the loss of fluid can also come a loss of valuable minerals, especially potassium, which is essential to good health.

Crochet Way To Join Linen

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Two letters arrived this week with similar queries. One lady had several pieces of Irish linen and was wondering how to join them to make a tablecloth. The other lady had several Irish linen serviettes and wrote: "As these are seldom used, perhaps you may have some ideas on how I could join them and make a tablecloth".

I suggest a simple crochet insertion which looks very exquisite. The beauty of this pattern is that as well as the insertion directions, it also has the same design for the edging which would finish off the tablecloth beautifully. These directions are on leaflet No. 7554, photographed as a blouse.

Another lady from Weyburn, Sask. wrote that in my column on sewing machines and hints on threading synthetics through the needle, I should have mentioned beeswax. I haven't heard this since I came to Canada. 30 years ago.

In England we used it on thread to give it strength, especially for buttons. Mrs. Ramsey writes: "If the end of the thread is drawn through a cake of beeswax, it stiffens it, keeps it from brooming and allows it to be poked through the eye of the needle with impunity."

There is a new sewing thread which combines the advantages of both synthetic fibres with cotton.

Synthetics are difficult to discipline, hence the inclination to splay or broom when cut. The beauty of this Koban is that unruly synthetic element is controlled by wrapping it with cotton. The sewer gets all the advantages of synthetic and cotton. It can be threaded with ease into a machine or hand sewing needle.

Everyone loves to knit baby clothes. They are dainty, light knitting and quickly made. This set is knitted mainly in plain stocking-stitch with bands of seed or moss-stitch. The front, back and sleeves are knitted separately, then put on one needle for knitting the yoke.

Bonnet and bootees make the set in the first size. They are knitted with a baby wool or sayelle.

To order Leaflet No. 6928 send 75 cents plus a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. Maclean, Knit and Chat, care of the Victoria Times, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard Des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers of my series are available for 75 cents, catalogue 25 cents, plus stamped envelope.

Puppies Need Safe Things to Chew On

Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR MR. MILLER: The main puppy problem we have is Pinky's grabbing everything in sight and chewing on it. She is teething, I realize, so I can understand her wanting to chew on something. I am prepared to put up with the fact that inludes my fingers, toes and chair legs. But what about smaller objects? Will she spit them out or is there danger of her swallowing them? Sometimes I can't tell what she is doing.

—S.O.

DEAR S.O.: The very young are usually orally-oriented. Pinky's penchant for oral exploration can be dangerous since she is as likely to swallow small objects as spit them out. Wadded up plastic or foil with or without food flavoring, small socks or portions of larger ones, string, buttons and bows, corks, baby bottle nipples, wood, stones, bone fragments, plant portions — you name it; anything small enought to be swallowed may be, eventually, by an exploring puppy.

The odds of minor digestive upset or major obstruction problems involving poisoning or possible surgery can best be avoided by keeping all small or othewise hazardous objects (electric light cords, for instance) out of reach. The puppy should be worth it. He needs safe things to chew, of course. They should be too large to swallow, too tough to extract pieces. That includes large nylon bones, large hard rubber balls and similar chewables designed for the purpose.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is there any cure for a nine-year-old cat that has spondylosis of the lumbar vertebrae? It's my understanding this is a form of arthritis?

— D.B.

DEAR D.B.: There is no cure for arthritis in any form including spondylosis deformans found in dogs and cats and showing, in x-ray, bony spurs at intervertebral spaces. Your own veterinarian is the best one to give you a prognosis, which will depend perhaps more on the symptoms your cat actually shows than on the degree of bone changes seen in the x-rays.

Pain, inco-ordination in the hindquarters, or related problems, are not necessarily related to the spondylosis changes seen in radiographs. There is, frequently, a cause for such symptoms unrelated to the spondylosis.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Are there any circumstances under which a gas stove pilot light could be dangerous to a nearby goldfish in a bowl.

—T.K:

DEAR T.K.: Yes, there are two. One if the pilot light should go out (and the gas remain on) and two, if the pilot light remains on and the goldfish bowl is too close to it.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: When you have a parakeet that's looking a bit peaked (sort of pale around the eyes, really), well, how do you know whether he really needs to go a doctor or not? Buzzo seems pretty sprightly in other ways.

I want to care for him, of course, but I hate to drag him off somewhere for nothing and pay for it if he doesn't need it.

—L.D.

DEAR L.D.: It's the same perennial perplexing problem: How do you know whether or not an animal is sick enough to need an examination? Unfortunately, the veterinarian can't tell you that until he sees the animal . . . . You, as the owner, often cannot tell how sick your pet is either, particularly a peaked but perky, possibly puny parakeet, since birds are especially prone to put on a good front no matter how sick they actually are. As with any species of pet, though, the better you know your bird's general habits and specific appearance, the quicker you will be able to detect changes and seek help. It's better to have one veterinary visit too many than to miss one that may mean the difference between keeping your pet and losing it to some unsuspectedly serious illness.

RUSSIA IN PROPHECY
ILLUSTRATED ADDRESS MARCH 5 AT HOLYROOD HOUSE 7:45 P.M.
G. McADAMS — D. SNOBELEN

RUSSIA

RUSSIA is being spoken of as a threat to world peace. China's premier warns the west. Alexander Solzhenitsyn says 'We are clearly moving toward a world war'.

EZEKIEL the prophet, Chapter 38, verse 16 'And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel as a cloud to cover the land. It shall be in the latter days.'

IRAN

The recent overthrow of the Shah of Iran has come as a thunderbolt upon the oil hungry world. The power struggle for this precious commodity will continue until it brings the world to chaos. It is only a matter of time and we in the western world will be under the pressure.

DANIEL the Prophet, Chapter 12:1 'There shall be a time of trouble such as never was 'etc.'

AMOS 3:7 'Surely the Lord God will do nothing but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets.

ISRAEL

ISRAEL though a small nation has for over 35 years been headlines in our news media. The eyes of our world political systems are focused on Israel.

JEREMIAH the prophet in chapter 30-3 'For lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will cause them to return to the Land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

DEUTERONOMY 32-8 'When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.'

EGYPT

EGYPT Israel's neighbours (enemies) to the west has shown herself ready to negotiate peace with Israel apart from her Arab neighbours. The Camp David Meetings are headline news.

ISAIAH the prophet, chapter 19, 'And the Lord shall smite Egypt and heal it, and they shall return even to the Lord. Verse 24 'In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt'.

These are amazing facts.

CHINA

CHINA has made a complete about face in a very short time from anti-western world to anti-Russian. This has taken many prophecy students by surprise. It remains a fact, the Chinese are being drawn into the vortex of world confusion.

JOEL 3:9 'Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; prepare war, wake up the mighty men.'

ISAIAH 49:12 Behold, these shall come from far: and, lo, these from the north, and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim.

For over one hundred and fifty years Bible students have been pointing out how world events would shape up at the time of the end of this age. Example: Dr. Thomas in 1848 wrote in his book 'Elpis Israel' "I think there cannot be the shadow of doubt that the autocrat of Russia, when he shall have attained to the plentitude of his power and dominion is the subject of the prophecy contained in Ezekiel 38".

For this reason and many others 'The Christadelphians' would like to share their excitement at seeing Bible Prophecy being fulfilled before our eyes. We are about to experience the beginning of the time of Great Tribulation. Luke 21-26

'Friends' together for Lent

Christ Church Anglican Cathedral is taking part this Lent in an ecumenical venture with friends in the Roman Catholic, United, Lutheran, Baptist, and Presbyterian Churches.

Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. beginning next Wednesday, March 7, all will get together for a short service in the tradition of each denomination—to be followed by refreshments and fellowship.

The schedule is Wednesday, March 7, Christ Church Cathedral; March 14, First Baptist; March 21, Grace Lutheran; March 28, St. Andrew's Roman Catholic; April 4, Metropolitan United. April 11, St. Andrew's Presbyterian.

All meetings at 7:30 p.m.

This is an excellent way of getting to know each other as we really are, to share each other's pattern of worship in Lent, and then to talk informally about the faith.

Christ Church Cathedral has the honor of being the first host, and will present the Office of Compline, sung in its traditional (Plainsong) form.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

For about 15 years following the Second World War, religion in North America was, so to speak, a growth industry. But during th early sixties institutional Christianity began to decline slowly and, during the past dozen or so years, the decline seems to have accelerated a little.

A mood of defeatism has developed in the churches. Many of the clergy have become listless and even despondent, and more than a few have left the ministry.

Many of the laity have quietly dropped out, with many more maintaining only a casual relationship. Dissension and conflict have at times seemed almost epidemic in congregations and parishes. And, at all levels of church life, a curious hypochondria manifests itself at times, with task forces appointed to take temperatures and feel pulses, and often to recommend restructuring here and there, and the devising of new programs and resources which experts recommend as having therapeutic value.

But there are signs of renewal in the churches, hopeful signs which challenge the mood of defeatism. There are significant indications of new life in congregations and parishes, and many pastors now are reporting modest increases in attendance at services.

As the churches have been forced by circumstances to jettison some of their traditional cargo they have come to see more clearly what their real purposes are. There is deeper awareness now than there has been for many years of the resources of faith, which can help bewildered, alienated persons to a new sense of meaning and purpose for their lives. This seems to be leading to abandonment of much of the gimmickry with which church life has been cluttered in recent years, and bringing new attention to the basics of faith in preaching and teaching.

A new congregationalism seems to be developing in many local churches which, in almost all denominations, has led to congregations and parishes sitting more loosely toward the ecclesiastical bureaucracies than they did only a few years ago. In this there is both hope and danger.

The hope is in the new emphasis on the devotions and disciplines of faith, a new concern for the basics of theology, a new vision of the churches as communities of compassion.

But this new congregational mood can lead to an uncreative pietistic ingrowness, to the development of a cozy clubbiness which doesn't see far beyond congregational bounds. A congregation specializing in its own comfort and convenience and success is in danger of becoming merely a little private cult.

There is evidence, though, that the new congregationalism is serving the compassionate mission to the world which is of the essence of Christianity. Christian outreach, after all, depends on a firm, vigorous base, and has its dynamic in worship and in the other disciplines of faith. Without renewal at the congregational and parish level there can be no renewal in the wider mission. Today, we Christians have no grounds for complacency—but no grounds for defeatism either.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Alcohol big killer

If a disease killed as many young people as impaired driving, it would be a national emergency, the United Church Observer says in a recent issue.

Alcohol has become "a real epidemic problem" in Canada and, as they combine it with driving, young people are killing themselves at a frightening rate, the article says.

It quotes a study that found 37 per cent of all drivers between the ages of 16 and 19 were involved in alcohol-related collisions in 1975. Another report estimates as many as 38 per cent of Canada's youth are problem drinkers.

What about child of the north?

1979—The Year of the Child. What will it mean to a native child growing up in northern Canada? Will it mean having life handled from birth to death by a government department, or being allowed to make decisions based on the values of native people? Will it mean a future living in harmony with the land that the child's ancestors have inhabited since the last ice age, or will that culture be crushed to make way for enormous development projects to provide energy for countless "things" coveted by people in the south?

These are hard questions from which Christians cannot turn away.

This month, a northern rights campaign will voice the concern of native people of northern Canada for the survival of their children, issuing "a call to justice today for our children tomorrow."

Sponsored by Project North, the inter-church task force in support of native peoples, representatives of northen native people will descend upon the Railway Committee Room of the House of Commons on March 15 and present statements of their positions in issuing this call.

They will represent people of the Council of Yukon Indians, Dene Nation of the Mackenzie Valley, Inuit of the Eastern Arctic, Nishga Tribal Council of B.C., Indian and Inuit people of Labrador.

Teams of native people then will fan out across Canada to talk to fellow Canadians in most major centres of the country. They will be in the Victoria area March 18 and 22. A series of meetings are planned, with a major event Tuesday, March 20 at 7:30 p.m. in St. John's Church hall, 1611 Quadra Street.

In preparation for this visit, Project North (Victoria) is inviting Christian people to come together to consider the kind of response God would expect them to make for the future of native children.

Rev. Terry Anderson of Vancouver School of Theology, and Rev. Wes Maultsaid of B.C. Inter-Church Committee for World Development Education, will discuss the alternatives at a meeting in Grace Lutheran Church Hall, 1273 Fort, 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 7.

Anderson, a graduate of St. Stephen's College in Edmonton and Union Theological Seminary in New York, is assistant professor of Christian ethics at VST.

Dene child, friend

Maultsaid, a former logger and RCMP member, is an Anglican priest and co-ordinator of the B.C. inter-church committee on world development education.

Film will feature Hong Kong church

The Carpenter, an audio-visual presentation about the work of the Church of the Holy Carpenter in Hong Kong, will be shown at St. John the Baptist Anglican Church Hall, Glencairn Road, in Colwood, Sunday, at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Robert MacRae, rector of St. John's Church on Quadra Street, will introduce the presentation and discuss participation of the Primate's World Relief and Development Fund in the work being done at the Holy Carpenter.

MacRae is former secretary of the primate's fund and has been closely associated with the needs of the Hong Kong parish.

An invitation is extended from St. John the Baptist parish and rector Rev. Joe Titus.

Singing duo back Friday

Salmond and Mulder, song-writing and recording artists from Vancouver, are returning to Victoria Friday for an 8 p.m. concert at Oak Bay secondary school auditorium.

This will be the duo's second public appearance in Victoria. Roy and Mike presented their first concert a year ago at the Emmanuel Baptist Church.

Roy Salmond, a native of Victoria, and Mike Mulder, Tsawwassen, are becoming known throughout Canada and the U.S. as artists committed to integrating their music and songs with their growing faith in the gospel of grace.

Roy and Mike joined musical forces in June, 1977, with a debut appearance as Salmond and Mulder at Concord Pavilion in California. Since that time, through an intricate blend of two acoustical guitars and their well-chosen lyrics, Mike and Roy have brought the message of God's love and acceptance to thousands throughout the U.S. and Canada.

When Roy Salmond and Mike Mulder return to Victoria on March 9 they will be joined in concerts by two special guests also familiar to many Victoria people, Roy's two sisters, Faye and Ferne. (Faye also happens to be Mike's wife.)

Tickets are available at the Christian Book Room and Logos Bookstore in Victoria. Prices are $2.50 advance and $3 at the door.

Roy and Mike will present a workshop on Christian artistry and songwriting the following morning, March 10, at 9 a.m. This workshop, sponsored by Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship in Victoria, will be in the Emmanuel Baptist Church Youth Lounge.

Seminar to answer troubling questions on God's existence

IS GOD DEAD? Does God care if we suffer? Does God understand computers? Is a belief in God anti-scientific? Answers to these and other troubling questions will be offered at a seminar on the existence of God presented Monday through Friday from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the SUB theatre, University of Victoria, and at Church of Christ, 3460 Shelbourne, at 7:30 p.m. daily. Dr. Virgil Trout, executive director of the International Foundation of Religious-Scientific Research, will assist in the series of lectures. A specialist in the philosophy of science in relation to Christian thought, Trout has been guest speaker at more than 300 university campuses in the free world.

●

A SPECIAL SEMINAR on the effect of alcohol and other drugs on people will be presented from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday at Church of Christ, 3460 Shelbourne. Experts invited to participate in discussions of the dangers are Constable Iain Brown, Saanich police, Gipp Forester, youth worker at Mustard Seed, Crossroads Academy principal Sam Hawkins, and street worker Gordie Holms.

●

CYRIL POWLES, professor of church history at Trinity College, Toronto, will speak on international development at next Wednesday's noon forum at St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra near Pandora, at 12:10 p.m. Powles, who served 21 years in southeast Asia, discusses why the churches can't stay out of international development issues in a 20-minute address, which will be followed by a 20-minute question and answer period. Free coffee and tea are provided but bring your own lunch.

●

A PROSPERITY MEETING will be held Thursday at 3 p.m. at the Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort, followed by tea.

●

GREEN LEAF MINISTRIES of Brandon will open a residential bible school in Brandon in September. The small residential school will offer the scriptures and related subjects in a homelike setting where people of all ages, marital status and denomination can study within a background of Anglicanism, including the charismatic experience. For information, write Rev. Donald Varcoe, Green Leaf Bible School, 403—12th St., Brandon, Man.

●

A YOUTH CHOIR from Garden City-Wilkinson Road Churches will present the folk musical Tell It Like It Is by Ralph Carmichael and Kurt Kaiser on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. in Garden City United Church, 4054 Carey Road. The chorus will be accompanied by Art Wright on organ, Mary Iverson on piano, Rob Clark on base and Russell Schronsky on drums. Co-ordinator is Theresa Knowlson and director is Barbara Johnstone. SADDLEMYER . . . world reputation

THE GALLERIES

The fascination of seeing two superb Haida Indian artists at work is an experience awaiting visitors to Art Mosaic in Market Square for the next two or three weeks. Doug Wilson, an argillite carver, and Francis Williams, silversmith, will be pursuing their craft and will also have work on display, says Art Mosaic partner Jim Bisakowski. There are still about $270,000 worth of handsome argillite carvings on view and for sale in the gallery.

At the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, a group showing opens Monday. The works are in several media — oils, landscapes, pencil, drawings, scenics and photography and have been executed by Jim Prendergast, Greg Johnson and Butch Sullivan.

Included in the regular Canadiana Costume Society's display of antique gowns worn at the turn of the century are a "Year of the Child" feature consisting of children's period clothing. This display is changed each month. The group show will continue through March 16. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Eight Chinese calligraphers are represented in a casual survey of the state of calligraphy outside China today, opening at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss, on March 14. This is not a coherent group show but rather a collection — seven men and one woman who represent different traditions.

All are united by the strong undeniable bond of exile from China, while promoting its cultural values, and each, despite the incongruity of a harried westernized life, continues to practise the deeply meditative art of calligraphy. Their works include paintings as well as original poetry. An illustrated publication accompanies the exhibition and works will be available for sale.

The Irish Connection

TORONTO (CP) — Ann Saddlemyer was an exuberant kid from Prince Albert, Sask., who was sure she never would become a teacher and never would have dreamed of becoming an academic.

That once naive child is now one of the world's leading academic authorities on Irish drama and the work of W. B. Yeats, J.M. Synge and Lady Augusta Gregory, three of the most influential figures in the development of 20th century theatre.

But despite Miss Saddlemyer's influence in her field, she is almost unknown to the Canadian public.

James Flannery, chairman of the theatre department of the University of Rhode Island, said Miss Saddlemyer's books and essays on Yeats, Synge and Lady Augusta are essential reading for other scholars.

"She has a much bigger reputation outside of Canada," Flannery said. "None of her (eight) books has ever been reviewed in a major publication in Canada."

You can't easily buy them, either. A check with Toronto's Theatrebooks, specialists in books on drama, turned up only one, the second of her major works on the collected plays of J. M. Synge.

Michael Sidnell, director of the University of Toronto's graduate centre for the study of drama, said Miss Saddlemyer is respected and liked by people who knew her well.

Sidnell succeeded Miss Saddlemyer after her five years as a driving force behind Hart House Theatre and the experimental Studio Theatre. She still teaches there, as well as for the university's English department.

Sidnell said Miss Saddlemyer is the chief person in the drama centre, and as a scholar is considered one of the experts in the field.

"It's very important for this country that there's a Canadian prominent in Irish studies."

And if Irish drama seems a bit removed from life in Canada, experts from Flannery to Saddlemyer, herself, say there are parallels between the Irish theatre movement in the Abbey theatre and the development of theatre now in Canada.

They said both movements grew out of intense nationalism, frustration with imported culture and the need to find an immediate outlet for homegrown talent, ideas and enthusiasm.

Marion Andre, who founded Theatre Plus, one of the city's most active professional companies, with the help of Miss Saddlemyer in 1973, described Miss Saddlemyer as a wonderful woman.

"I really love her. She is solidly, truly, deeply interested in the development of professional theatre. She's a superb worker behind the scenes."

All this from a simple twist of fate, Miss Saddlemyer said.

Born in Prince Albert, she grew up in Humboldt, Sask. and didn't see a professional theatre company until university. But she was active in local theatre as a teenager.

At 13, she joined with friends to launch a professional dance band in which she arranged the music and played piano.

She studied at the University of Saskatchewan, Queen's University in Kingston and at the university of London for a 1961 PhD on Irish drama.

After teaching jobs at the University of Victoria, she came to the University of Toronto in 1971.

MANNERING . . . gets grant

West Coast Drama History

Peter Mannering, whose enthusiasm and knowledge of theatre founded Bastion, Victoria's first long-lived professional company, has reason to be stepping high this week.

News that he has been awarded a Canada Council Senior Arts Grant will launch Mannering on a favorite and long-considered project — the preparation of a book on West Coast theatre. "I want it to be built on personal accounts of those who developed theatre in the area," he says.

Not wasting any time, he has started already with a day of taping with Sidney Risk talking about his Everyman Theatre in Vancouver.

Another source of satisfaction for Mannering is his own Four Seasons Musical Theatre's outstanding success with Rumple Stiltskin. It has been playing Saturday afternoons at McPherson Playhouse and drawing record crowds of youngsters and accompanying adults. Next Saturday Rumple moves to Cedar Hill Community Centre where it will be seen at 2:30 p.m.

Four Seasons will hold another "Hard Times Party" in the Cedar Hill Centre on Saturday evening, March 10, from 7:30 to midnight. Billed as a family affair, the party recreates the spontaneous traditional fun of those bad-old-good-old days when nobody had any money and soup kitchens and bread lines actually existed.

Tickets at $7 per person will provide food from the "bread line" and "soup kitchen" and entertainment by the Four Seasons regular company. Featured will be Marge Bridgeman, Ralph Cole, Janey Woods-Morris, Steve Moysey, Hetty Clews, Derek Muir and Don House, with Marge Adelberg at the piano.

There will also be dancing to the music of Bittersweet Mood and costume prizes for those who want to get into the hard times era or "slum" in evening dress. Costumes are not obligatory for coming and enjoying the party. Phone 598-8307 concerning tickets.

Jamaica Mail Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — No air or surface mail will be delivered from Canada to Jamaica because of a postal strike in that Caribbean country, the post office announced today.

A department spokesman said all mail to Jamaica will be held in Canada until the strike is over but may be returned to senders if it is prolonged.

Returned items will be marked "service temporarily suspended" and refunds on parcel postage will be available at local post offices.

Not So Welcome

HELSINKI (AP) — The Finnish city of Karkkila plans to remove signs that say welcome in six languages — including Chinese — as a result of the Sino-Vietnamese war, the newspaper Helsingin Sanomat reported.

Bastion Seeks Funds

Dramatic increases in theatre attendance have brought Bastion Theatre repeated box-office records this year. It has been rewarding for Bastion's staff and company members to see the theatre more and more often filled to capacity.

The fact is, though, that no theatre could completely recover its expenses from the box-office unless it were to at least double admission prices. For this reason Bastion has launched its annual "reasonable request" campaign for funds. It is called a "reasonable request" because Bastion is asking only that people donate what they can afford, whether it be $5 or $500.

Bastion board president Clare Copeland has announced the objective as $50,000, and says that before official launching of the campaign $26,000 had already been received or pledged. The $50,000 goal represents no increase for more than three years despite rising costs and expansion in theatre services to the public. These rising costs have so far been absorbed by increased attendance.

The amount sought is split up as follows: private, $25,000; corporate $15,000; foundations, $5,000; events, $5,000. The campaign will run through the end of June. All donations are 100 per cent tax-deductible.

Country Star Lives Again

In June of 1949, when a string-bean of a young country singer, Alabama-born Hank Williams, stepped on the Grand Ole Opry stage in Nashville and scored an overwhelming success with Lovesick Blues plus half-a-dozen encores, it was the beginning of a truly meteoric career.

But the meteor was short-lived. It sank to the earth and was extinguished less than three years later in the back seat of a sleek new Cadillac. The driver of the Cadillac was conveying Williams to a New Years Eve concert date. He drove for five hours before finding out that his passenger was not asleep, but dead.

Hank Williams: The Show He Never Gave, is an imagined re-creation of what that New Years Eve concert might have been like if Hank Williams had made it. It comes to McPherson Playhouse Monday for a single performance.

An overnight star at 25, a tormented and broken man before the age of 30, the marvellously talented Williams long fascinated Canadian film script writer and author Maynard Collins, but it was not until he realized that his long-time friend, singer-entertainer Sneezy Waters, was ideal for the role, that he wrote the play. His first draft of the script took him exactly half an hour. A recruiting of Canadian talent included attracting experienced Peter Froehlich as director.

The show, born in an Ottawa tavern, was an immediate and brilliant success upon its unveiling in Ottawa and Toronto in 1977. Waters' performance was hailed as a tour de force — an incredible, almost uncanny recreation of Hank Williams; not simply because of a striking resemblance to the Nashville star in looks and singing style, but because in his dramatic portrayal of what would certainly have been Williams' last concert he seems actually to suffer a metamorphosis and become Williams.

One audience member describes it this way: "Slowly, in the solitary focus of a spotlight we recognize the stress symptoms; a leak begins, the pain and frustration no longer able to be contained, spills forth in the lovely heart-breaking songs until even they are sundered and the destruction of the artist is complete."

Among accolades the show has received is New York Variety's "a rousing tribute to Williams." Other American show people have come across to see it and as a result a United States tour is in the works; either that or an extensive run in a major city.

Waters is backed by the Drifting Cowboys — George Essery, leader, pedal steel guitar; Keith Glass, guitar; Michael Jas. Butler, bass, and Joel Zifkin, fiddle — in the performance of many famous Williams songs, including Hey Good Lookin', Your Cheatin' Heart and Jambalaya.

The current cross-Canada tour of this all-Canadian show has been assisted by a Canada Council Touring Office grant.

The activity begins tonight at 8, with a recital by cellist Terrance Sturge and pianist Robert Holliston. Then on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. a recital by one of the Conservatory's most brilliant senior piano students, Arne Sahlen, will be featured.

Greg Duckett, violin, with Larry de la Haye, clarinet, Kathy Duncan, flute, and Madelaine Wheeler, piano, will present an interesting program on Thursday at 8 p.m. The week will end on a highlight with the last in this season's series of Trio Victoria concerts. Auditions Set For 'Smile Show'

Famous Victoria showman Jerry Gosley has announced the first step in putting together next summer's traditional Smile Show — the 27th annual edition. He will hold auditions for the show on March 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the Theatrical Arts Studio, 1318 Broad.

Any one wishing to try out for the show should make an appointment by calling 598-1819 or 478-3733. Auditionees should have skills in singing and dancing, improvisational acting techniques, some knowledge of the sketch or novelty acts and a good sense of comic routine.

The lunatic musical revue will run at the Empress Hotel from June 30 to Sept. 7 and this year will feature BBC and CBC entertainer Toni Sinclair. Also, impersonator Steve Ivings will return. Director of the 1979 show is Paul Liittich, best known for his acting with Kaleidoscope Theatre, Bastion Theatre, and, several years ago, for his skill as actor and co-director of the Smile Show.

Liittich will be assisted by Victoria's popular Sylvia Hosie, Bebe Eversfield will choreograph and Anton Gosley will stage manage and design and build the sets.

Bouquets on the Stage Keep Him Out of Garden

audrey johnson

An actor who loves gardening, both indoors and out, likes people and old objects that suggest to him personalities who once used or wore them; loves to talk, winging his way through a wide but mostly philosophical range of subjects — that's Roland Hewgill.

When you interview him, forget about asking specific questions. He'll talk around and over and through any question and seldom close in on anything directly related to his profession. Presumably he has long ago exhausted all he really wanted to say on the subject.

The theatre is a fact of his life. It's been good to him, one understands, and he enjoys it: "I love rehearsals," he says, nodding at the script of The Shadow Box, which he is currently appearing in for Bastion Theatre, having only a couple of weeks ago, as Malvolio, completed the run of Bastion's Twelfth Night.

But he doesn't really want to talk about working; about how he arrives at his characterizations; about the roles he has played and the condition of Canadian theatre. He provides one instead with an intimation, a projection of how his outlook on life was fashioned, of the influences that motivated him in choosing the theatre and have kept him in it.

If he catches a question in mid-flight he plays with it momentarily like a juggler until it blows away on a stream of words. Between myriad cups of tea in a hotel room he has filled with plants, he darts about among the foliage of his life.

Hewgill grew up in Kitchener, Ont. He says his childhood was unhappy, deprived of much that is normally considered essential to a satisfactory childhood. It all began, he says, when his parents were killed in an accident when he was only a few months old.

"As a schoolboy I was terribly fat — I hated myself." (It's hard to believe now, looking at his towering lean body, that he was ever the "blimp" he describes.) "But I always had a sense of humor. That's absolutely an essential for getting along in life — the more difficult things are, the more essential humor is," he declares.

Hewgill does come to grips with one repeated question: When did the idea of theatre intrude itself in a non-theatric environment?

"It was my own invention," he says. "No one took an interest in it or in much of anything I really thought about . But I found out I could amuse people, make them laugh. It brought a sense of power." He agrees it was a kind of acceptance and importance that was otherwise missing from his life.

Later he made his way to London and there did a little work in a drama school and in repertory. When he returned to Canada he found Stratford, met Tyrone Guthrie, was accepted and settled into the profession. He subsequently toured with the Canadian Players in the 1950s, a winter company created to fill the off-season void for Stratford actors.

Hewgill's brief brush with drama schooling did nothing to convince him that drama school is an essential preparation for life in the theatre. People of talent will find their way if they are determined on their goal, he says.

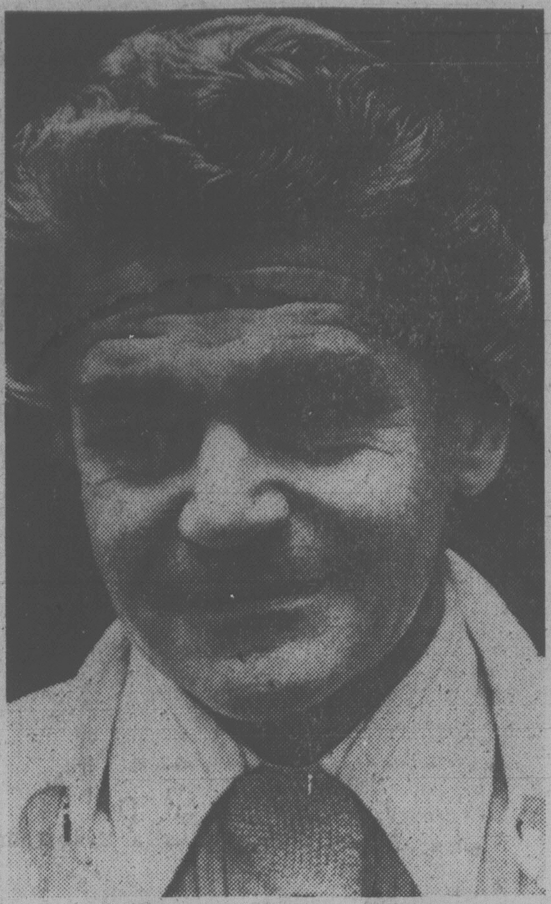
Technique?

"Yes, they can teach you that but they can't teach you to feel."

An actor, like an artist in any other medium, he suggests, is an artist in name only, if technique is his sole resource. It is part of Hewgill's philosophy that a person with real talent has a responsibility to develop and use it.

"In fact, no matter what life has handed you, you have to come to terms with it — find ways to make the best of it," he says.

"That's why I'm discovering so much satisfaction in doing this play. If life has handed you death — well that's an inescapable part of life too, isn't it? You have to come to terms with it and I think Michal Cristoferin Shadow Box has brought out certain approaches, certain philosophies that are meaningful and — well — healing."



HEWGILL . . . word juggler

He refers again to a miserable childhood and early youth; to the inevitable failures along with the successes since then; to the richness of experience and the satisfaction that he, as an eighth generation Canadian, has had from getting to know his country so thoroughly.

"Life has never been dull." His blue eyes crinkle into the smile that is never far away. "I've done what I wanted to do, been lucky with offers of interesting roles and have a lot of good friends all over Canada. I'm thinking about retiring soon, concentrating on a garden I don't have to leave for long periods. I've been here in Victoria almost two months now ... but I don't know ... maybe not for a while."

Somehow one feels certain that retirement won't come soon. Certainly not as long as the interesting roles are dangled in front of him. Roland Hewgill may hanker to delve in the garden but bouquets gathered in the theatre are irresistable.

Montoya Returns For UVic Concert

A Spanish gypsy, Montoya was a musical prodigy who achieved national renown by the time he was 14 years old. Now one of the most widely experienced performers in any concert idiom, Montoya has appeared throughout the world and is the most recorded flamenco artist in history.

In following closely the traditional thematic titles of his music, Montoya mirrors the true nature of flamenco, although the selections he plays are all his own compositions. The essence of this guitarist's unique art is that he can take such short melodic schemes, improvise upon them and create a wholly new self-contained musical entity.

He became the first flamenco guitarist ever to take the unheard of step of performing a solo concert without the aid of a dancer or singer.

A notable fact is that Montoya cannot rely on printed music by another composer because this masterful musician does not read a note. As one critic commented, "he does something much more important; he makes music."

MACINTYRE
. . . composer

Singer, actor, composer — David MacIntyre has been occupied in all these capacities in Victoria during the last three or four years. A serious music student who is completing a Master of Music degree in composition at University of Victoria School of Music, David's special interest is in all aspects of the musical theatre.

His first opera, written in 1977, will be a feature of a UVic-sponsored concert Sunday at the University Centre auditorium. Humulus the Mute is a chamber opera, and before anyone takes fright at that term, it is used simply to denote a small or short work which may be funny or sad, and done in any musical style, ancient or modern.

Humulus is a one-act opera in four scenes and its performance time is approximately 30 minutes. It will be conducted by George Corwin, the accompanying chamber orchestra of 10 musicians being on stage as part of the action.

A problem basic and quite vital to an opera composer, as many famous operatic composers have traumatically realized, is the finding of a worthy libretto. Here, David's choice is indeed excellent. His libretto is based on a short play by the French master, Jean Anouilh. It's a comic fantasy in which the central character, Humulus, is mute except for the uttering of one word a day. If he wants to utter more than one, he must be silent for the requisite number of days to save up enough words for his needs.

Humulus has fallen in love with charming Helene, and in order to declare his love must save up for 30 days. That's the crux of the situation; the denouement is something else!

"The play was written at a very early age and was Anouilh's first published script," says MacIntyre. "Now it's my first operatic work but I've yet to have work published. In the music I've tried to capture a feeling of the '20s and a French ambience."

The composer is also stage director and designer for his premiere. He has worked on a slim budget, drawing on his imagination backed by experience in various operatic and dramatic productions around the city.

The cast contains some well known vocal artists: Erika Kurth sings the Duchess, Richard Margison is the Tutor to Humulus; Lanny Pollet appears as the Baron, Margot Andison is Helene and Humulus is seen as a child played by Lucas Corwin and as the adoring adolescent by Randall Weiss.

Corwin has selected music to complement the opera in terms of period. For the first half of the program he will conduct the University of Victoria Orchestra in Kurt Weill's Suite from The Threepenny Opera, and Darius Milhaud's jazz-inspired La Creation du Monde.

Humulus the Mute will also be the centrepiece of a Victoria Musical Art Society concert at McPherson Playhouse on Sunday, March 11.

New Techniques Sought To Curb Severe Pain

By VICTOR COHN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Heroin — much hailed as a miracle drug to ease the pain of the terminally ill — is proving no better than morphine and other familir drugs in tests so far.

But new attention to pain and the plight of the suffering and dying should lead to effective pain control for millions of patients.

This hopeful assessment was given by panels of experts at a conference on pain and humanitarian care at the National Institutes of Health.

The final word on heroin is not yet in, said Dr. Seymour Perry, head of a year-old federal inter-agency committee on new therapies for pain and discomfort. "We should have much better information in a year or so," he reported.

But in the two main American tests — at Georgetown University here and at Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, New York — morphine and other drugs are proving highly effective in the vast majority of patients.

Doctors at St. Christopher's Hospice in London — which became famed for its care of the painfully dying, including liberal use of a heroin-cocaine-alcohol cocktail — has dropped the cocaine because it "added nothing" and switched from heroin to morphine for most patients, Dr. Thomas West of that center said.

There are exceptions, the doctors added, where heroin can more effectively be used in large doses because of the speed with which it dissolves in the bloodstream.

But the most important element in easing pain, said the doctors, is a change in doctors' own attitudes.

Led by St. Christopher's and other centers, the attitude is changing from one where pain is treated when it becomes severe to one where pain-killers are given in anticipation, before there is suffering.

A further idea is not use of pain-killers alone but "skilled symptom control" for many kinds of discomfort, said Dr. William Fischer of Hospice, Inc., a New Haven, Conn., organization that gives hospice-type care to the terminally ill in their own homes.

"One of the most exciting developments I've seen," said Dr. West, "is a new 'symptom control team' at St. Luke's hospital in New York. It's a team of specialized doctors, nurses and a chaplain called in when pain is out of control. They deal not only with physical but also with social, emotional and spiritual pain. We're adopting this team idea at St. Christopher's."

In the new treatment of pain and the dying, there also has to be "a focus on the family," Dr. Fischer added. "When the patient dies, the family survives."

New Haven's Hospice, Inc., will soon open a $3.5 million, 44-bed unit for terminally ill patients who can't be cared for at home or need temporary hospital-type care, Fischer said.

NIH officials said they support the establishment of "some" such hospices as research and demonstration centers.

But Fischer said the hospice movement, if it is to remain humane and also cost-effective, should help as many families as possible care for patients at home, with the help of hospice teams.

What is needed, said Dr. Robert Butler, head of the National Institute on Aging, is "a hospice concept," one of giving the terminally ill and the suffering expert, humane care no matter where they may be, in specially named units or not.

But he warned against establishing too many independent, free-standing hospices, lest they become mere "death houses," cut off from the mainstream of medical care in the same way as the "already disastrous" nursing home industry.

"If we aren't careful," said the National Cancer Institute's Dr. Diane Fink, "if the patients in hospices don't get good, meticulous medical management, we may miss some who are potentially curable."

Hong Kong Goes Underground

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hong Kong is going underground to relieve the horrendous commuting problems of its 4.7 million people.

The British colony is constructing a $2 billion Mass Transit Railway System (MTRS) that will carry 1.8 million passengers daily by 1980.

The system is the "most significant development" to date in Hong Kong's public transport operations, according to Norman Thompson, chairman of the Hong Kong Mass Transit Railway Corp. (MTRC).

The railway will link — via a cross-harbor tunnel — Victoria Island with Kowloon and the New Territories. The first 5.4 miles of the 16.2-mile system is scheduled to carry its first passengers in October 1979. The cross-harbor tunnel will open in March 1980, officials say, with the remaining part of the system opening in 1983.

To get around the city areas, jammed with high-rise dwellings and up and down mountain roads, most people turn to the current overcrowded public transport system — buses, trams, taxis, minibuses and trains.

With 300 vehicles to the mile, one car for every 33 people and with 80 percent of the people living in about an eighth of the available space, Hong Kong's peak hour traffic is a nightmare.

Since the railway follows major transport arteries, Thompson sees the system as the "key element" in a plan to reduce public transport congestion.

Without the railway, congestion will persist, Thompson asserts, because "we will be drawing passengers from the other transport systems and by the mid-1980s, we will probably have the highest passenger volume in the world."

MTRS has a dual purpose — to move people and make money, he said.

It is a public body, but the only shareholder is the Hong Kong government which granted the coporation $173 million with the rest of the funding coming from bond issues and medium-term loans.

In addition to passenger revenues, MTRS will receive a large sum of money from development of the land it owns.

Duesenberg Coming Back

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — The Duesenberg, a car so luxurious it signified instant prestige in the 1920s, is being revived. It will have its familiar bow-tie bumper and Duesenbird hood ornament — and an unfamiliar $100,000 price tag.

Most people dreamed of owning a Duesenberg a half century ago when it was first brought out by two Indianapolis automakers, Augie and Fred Duesenberg.

Today, collectors are willing to pay more than $200,000 for a good Model J Duesenberg produced from 1929 through 1937. About 480 were built at prices ranging from $14,000 to $20,000 — a fortune during the Depression.

A prototype of the new Duesenberg was unveiled by Harlan and Kenneth Duesenberg, grand-nephews of Augie and Fred.

"We didn't consider making a replica," Harlan Duesenberg said. "There's already a replica on the market and it's a pretty good one. In the 1920s, the Duesenberg was ahead of its time and that's what we want now."

The birth of the Duesenberg prototype took four years in a small shop in Mundelein, northwest of Chicago. It fulfilled the dream of Kenneth, 55, an industrial designer, and Harlan, 51, who raced stock cars after the Second World War and sold insurance to race tracks.

"We wanted to bring back a true American prestige car and dreamed of doing it ever since our dad showed us scrapbooks of the Duesenberg when we were youngsters," said Kenneth.

"We hope to get into full production in two years, making at most 90 cars a year, all handcrafted."

Although it resembles a Lincoln, much of the new car's heritage is Cadillac. The chassis and drive train comes from the Fleetwood Brougham. The prototype is a four-door town coupe. Standard equipment includes the 425-cubic-inch Caddy V8 and all the automatic and power equipment of today's luxury cars.

When asked about its mileage, the chief engineer for the brothers, Robert (Pete) Peterson, replied:

"Anyone who can buy one doesn't have to think about how much a gallon of gas costs."

SKATEBOARD FAD may be on wane but there's new sport on horizon — wheeled bobsledding. It's not for fainthearted and not, repeat, not recommended in any area where there's traffic. St. Michael's school students, left, Tom Kirk, team manager John Holman and Wayne Senior, are claiming credit for sport's development. The wheeled bobsled resembles oversized skateboard and uses similar kinds of wheels but carries two riders and requires bobsled techniques and balance control. Kirk and Senior shown above in action, say anyone interested in trying sport ahould wear crash helmets, knee and elbow pads and other protective gear.

Year-Round Fare Cuts by CP Air

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air continued its price war with Air Canada on Friday with discounts of 35- to 45-per-cent below regular economy fares on flights within British Columbia, Alberta and the Yukon.

The airline said the flights will be available year round beginning April 17, subject to government approval, on trips of seven to 30 days and must be booked a week before the trip.

The fares will be available only on flights within the region and not on legs of transcontinental routes that pass through it.

Under the plan, the $254 round-trip economy fare on flights between Whitehorse and Vancouver or Edmonton will be available for between $140 and $152. A return flight between Grand Prairie, Alta., and Edmonton would cost $54 on the plan, compared to $90 for a regular economy flight, while return between Vancouver and Watson Lake, Yukon, will cost $133, compared to $242 for regular economy.

The airline is also offering discounts, some more than 50 per cent, on mainline cross-Canada routes from March 27 through May 7, subject to government approval.

For example, the rate between Vancouver and Toronto return will be $159, the same as Air Canada's rate between Victoria and Toronto. CP Air does not quote rates from Victoria because the company does not fly into Victoria airport.

"We recognize that there is a high degree of dependency on our services in the cities and smaller communities in this area," said CP Air president Ian Gray said of the regional plan.

Gray said CP Air's application for a four-per-cent increase in regular economy fares now before the Canadian transport commission is needed by April 1 because of inflation, fuel prices and government charges.

Job Guarantee For Principals?

The Greater Victoria School Board wants to establish a clearer policy on how long school principals should remain on the job and what guarantees should be accorded them.

This week the board decided to launch a study of the policies in other districts.

And one board member, Trustee John Young, will have more than the usual interest in the outcome.

"I'm an expert in principal's tenure," said Young, who was sacked as principal of Campbell River High School in 1972.

Young noted principals have tenure only as teachers. He said principals are assigned to their jobs for indefinite periods of time.

The board will be examining whether the terms of assignment should be fixed.

No Blame In Death Of Inmate

Gunderson had appeared in provincial court earlier in the day on remand on a charge of possession of a restricted weapon. Prison officials believe he managed to get hold of the drug sometime during his transfer between the jail and court.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer, the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

ARMSTRONG - In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away March 3, 1976. Always remembered and sadly missed by his wife Queenie and four daughters.

HOLLAND — In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles E. Holland, who passed away on March 2, 1977.

It broke our hearts to lose you
You did not go alone
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.

There is no parting from those we love
No distance can divide
For each day in memory's garden
We will walk side by side.

There is someone who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.

Gone is the face we loved so dear
Silent the voice we loved to hear
'Tis sad, but true, I wonder why
The best are always the first to die.

What you are is God's gift to you

HOLLAND — In memory or Charles E. Holland who died March 2, 1977.

It broke our hearts to lose you
You did not go alone
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Vietnam Mired in Cambodia

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

BANGKOK, Thailand — Almost two months after Vietnamese troops conquered Phnom Penh, Cambodia appears to have become a quagmire for its new rulers.

Hanoi finds itself in the position of its one-time adversaries, South Vietnam and the former Lon Nol government of Cambodia, unable to win active support from much of the population and struggling to build an administration with dubious success in the face of guerrilla opposition.

Much like the U.S.-supported South Vietnam and Cambodian governments, Vietnam has trouble resupplying its forces because of fallen bridges and mined roads that halt its now-mechanized army. In several towns, its forces are bottled up by the guerrillas, sources say.

For Cambodia, the Vietnamese conquest has brought a new step toward the destruction of a people already torn by five years of war ending in 1975 only to be succeeded by the mass murders and population transfers of the war's victors and today's guerrillas, the Khmer Rouge led by Pol Pot.

In western Cambodia, where Vietnam's supply lines are longest and its control tenuous to non-existent, executions enforcing Pol Pot's control-by-terror tactics have resumed in the wake of Vietnam's troops, according to refugees who have fled to Thailand.

Pol Pot's troops and cadre ran to the jungles ahead of the Vietnamese advance, refugees say, but they told villagers they would return and in many places that they have reoccupied they have brought vengeance on those they accuse of having been contaminated by the Vietenamese.

Village chiefs are murdered, marketplaces in supposedly Vietnamese-controlled areas are attacked, senior officials apparently don't travel around the countryside, villages have been taken, lost and retaken and there are reports that some areas, particularly Western Battambang Province, are being resupplied with food by air.

In some western districts, Vietnamese troops were conducting what the U.S. military once called search-and-destroy sweeps looking for Pol Pot units during January, but now they appear to keep to the towns, analysts say.

No central government apparatus seems to be functioning under the regime of Heng Samrin, who was named Cambodia's leader after the Vietnamese invasion. Even the regime's own radio station can report no large organizing meetings or rallies of support.

Three of the Vietnamese-installed regime's ministers held a meeting with medical personnel to plan health services, the radio said. They had convened three doctors, one midwife and one medical student, according to the official report.

"If things had gone well, there would be photographs of crowds with flags and banners of welcome," one source said. "The absence isn't due to a lack of photographers."

It's also not due to the people's love for the brutal Pol Pot government, but rather to their fear.

If the 100,000 to 150,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia could provide security, there are signs that they would be welcomed by a part of the population.

'Surprised Out of Our Chairs' by Voyager Data

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 1 spacecraft, a continuing source of surprises as it speeds toward Jupiter, has revealed that the enormous planet is ringed by superhot, electrified sulphur particles.

The doughnut-shaped ring — about 384,000 kilometres above Jupiter — had been discovered earlier, but Voyager's instruments show it to be amazingly different from what had been suspected, said Donald Shemansky, a space scientist from the University of Arizona.

"We were surprised right out of our chairs," he said Friday at a news conference at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. Neither the large concentration of sulphur nor the tremendous heat had been seen before.

Voyager 1 was within 3.2 million kilometres of Jupiter today and closing rapidly after a journey of 18 months. The spaceship will come within 276,400 kilometres of the planet Monday before heading for a rendezvous with Saturn next year. Trailing behind is Voyager 2, due at Jupiter in four months and at Saturn in 1981.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said both spacecraft are operating well and the $500-million mission is proceeding smoothly toward Monday's encounter with Jupiter, more than 640 million kilometres from earth.

The cameras aboard Voyager 1 are returning increasingly detailed pictures as they scan not only the colorful planet but several of its moons as well.

The largest of the 13 moons is Ganymede, which from a distance of 3.2 million kilometres looks like a sparkling Christmas ornament — its brilliant surface broken by large, dark blotches that are pockmarked with bright spots that may be meteor craters.

Shemansky said the surprising sulphur ring, or torus, is perhaps 130,000 kilometres thick and roughly follows the orbit of Io, the second moon out from Jupiter. The atoms of sulphur and a few other elements apparently are stripped from the surface of Io and fed into the ring.

Dare Sparks Coffin Caper

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (UPI) — Country Bill White said a woman couldn't cut it, but housewife Linda Barker was ready today to live in an underground coffin for several months to prove him wrong.

The two daredevils — one a professional and the other a natural — were scheduled to be interred Friday in their 6 x 6 x 6-foot coffin, divided by a ¾-inch plywood partititon, to see who could "play buried" the longest.

However, afternoon thundershowers interfered with the grave-digging and the burial was postponed until today.

White, 45, is a stuntman and veteran of seven burials including a world record coffin stay, and Ms. Barker is a housewife who can't refuse a dare.

Before learning of the delay, Ms. Barker had prepared for her challenge to Country Bill's graveyard supremacy by sleeping, which is also what White did.

"She's been anxious since last week when it was put off (also because of rain)," said her husband, Bob. "But right now she's sound asleep."

After being informed of the delay, Barker said his wife would be disappointed.

"She was ready. She really wants that record and she really wants to beat Bill White," he said.

Although destined to be in a prone position for as long as five months, White also prepared by sleeping.

"That's what I usually do," said the Bonifay, Fla., native.

The challenge match was set up after Ms. Barker, 26, of Henderson, Tenn., saw a television talk show with White discussing the world record 134 days, 2 hours and 55 minutes he was buried in Massachusetts. White said it was a feat a woman couldn't accomplish.

"She heard the comment Bill White made and she's the type of woman who when someone dares her, she does it," Barker said. "She's convinced she can do it. One time someone dared her and said she couldn't stay in the trunk of a car all day. She stayed in 10 hours and won a case of beer."

The coffin will have electricity and telephones so the buried can communicate with the above-ground world.

Gunpoint-Parade Mom Headed to Psychiatrist

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A psychiatric evaluation has been ordered for a Buffalo woman who, police say, forced her six children at gunpoint to march single file along 3.2 kilometres of city streets.

Judge H. Buswell Roberts of City Court ordered the psychiatric tests for Grace Jones, 37, at her arraignment on charges of criminal possession of a weapon and reckless endangerment.

Police said they arrested Mrs. Jones this week while she was marching her children — aged two to 18 — down the middle of a street.

Officers said she was wearing a nightgown and a raincoat and was holding a gun in a coat pocket. No one was injured.

Queen Back in 'Poor' Britain

LONDON (AP) — Loaded with millions of dollars worth of personal gifts, Queen Elizabeth returned Friday from a hot and socially tricky tour of seven Persian Gulf states to a wintry, strike-bound Britain.

The 19-day trip had its awkward moments, such as when even the highly poised Queen was unable to suppress a gasp when a sheikh's wife in the United Arab Emirates presented her with a fabulous necklace.

The trip was, however, a masterful display of the 52-year-old monarch's professional sang-froid. She glided smoothly along a narrow path of maintaining dignity while managing to avoid offending local customs of female submissiveness.

Her wardrobe of conservative, knee-length coats and dresses — topped by a hat which at least once blew off — was a compromise between the modest English rose and the cloaked and veiled Arab wives.

Reporters accompanying the royal couple reported that Philip, enraged when he became separated from the Queen by hundreds of jostling welcomers in the small Oman centre of Nizwa on Thursday, blew his cool with a four-letter word.

Although the Queen gave no public displays of irritability during the tour, associates were reported as saying she became increasingly angry at being denied her usual habit of "meeting" up to 50 persons in seven minutes during royal tours.

Her hosts in almost every country gave her heavy security protection with motorcades speeding at up to 144 kilometres an hour from point to point. (Under Arab customs, the faster the convoy moves, the greater the status of the visitor.)

The treasure trove of gifts showered on the royal visitors by the oil-rich Gulf heads-of-state was piled into the royal yacht Brittannia and guarded by the crew of 21 officers and 256 men.

The most notable gift, a knee-length necklace of gold chain mail embellished with sapphires and amethysts, came from the emir of Qatar. Newspapers said jewel merchants valued the massive oranament at about $2.4 million.

The Queen — one of the world's richest women — took along solid silver salvers for each of her hosts and smaller presents for lesser personages. Buckingham Palace refused to give the cost of these gifts but newspapers estimated it totalled no more than $272,000.

Throughout the trip, the Queen's hosts, carefully ignored current economic realities — that Britain, which once dominated the Gulf states, now is something of a suppliant.

Britain depends on the countries she visited for part of its oil needs, millions of pounds of trade contracts and jobs for thousands of British advisers.

Iran Vows To Pay Its Debts

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran's new revolutionary government promised today that it will honor all its foreign debts amounting to about $5 billion.

Dr. Mohammad Ali Mowlavi, newly appointed governor of the Central Bank of Iran, also said studies are under way to abolish interest rates from the country's banking system to bring it into line with Islamic laws.

In his first major statement since being appointed two days ago, Mowlavi said the bank hoped "in the very near future" to be in a position to announce "proper rates of exchange" for the Iranian rial. He also said he favors floating exchange rates against other major currencies.

Import of Frozen Meat Banned by Khomeini

TEHRAN (WP) — Ayatollah Khomeini Friday banned the import of frozen meat — which accounts for roughly a third of Iran's requirement — on ground that slaughter abroad failed to meet strict Islamic standards.

Coming only a day after the religious leader left Tehran for the holy city of Qom, the decision was widely interpreted as signalling he had no intention of relinquishing effective power as some quarters suggested his change of residence indicated.

However, the decision, coming on the heels of other Khomeini edicts enforcing strict Islamic practice, may indeed have only hastened a decline in his once unquestioned leadership testified to by persistent lay and leftist opposition to his dream of turning Iran into an Islamic republic.

Khomeini, according to the state Voice of the Islamic Revolution radio, also ordered all frozen meat now in Iran to be destroyed, raising the spectre of meat shortages and even greater inflation.

Australia, New Zealand, France and Eastern Europe traditionally supplied most of Iran's frozen meat imports.

Other recent Khomeini decisions that have raised hackles involve suspension of the 1967 Family Protection Act and introduction of accelerated justice in keeping with the Sharia, or body of Islamic law.

In other developments, an angry mob was reported by the state radio to have killed three policemen in Najafabad near the central city of Isfahan.

Najafabad was the scene in mid-December of an army rampage in favor of the shah in which more than 30 Iranians were reported killed.

Multipiece Tire Rims May Be Banned in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is seeking advice on whether to ban tire rims made in two or three pieces after reports that accidents involving multipiece rims have killed at least 71 persons.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Friday that tire rims made in several parts can explode, hurling lethal pieces of metal into victims standing nearby.

Multipiece rims "are needlessly killing and injuring countless Americans every year," the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety said in asking for the federal investigation.

Single-piece rims are used on all automobiles and pose no hazard, officials said. The two and three-piece rims are commonly used on trucks, buses and campers.

Rims made of more than one piece include a heavy, detachable metal locking ring that clamps over the tire and holds it in place.

"Under a wide variety of conditions, the pressure of an inflated tire or a relatively slight change in tire pressure can cause this metal ring to leave the wheel in an unpredictable, extremely violent explosion, killing or dismembering people working on the tire or simply walking or driving by," warned William Haddon, president of the insurance industry's highway safety institute.

Such explosions have occurred at least 439 times since 1957 with 71 causing one or more deaths, said Joan Claybrook, administrator of the highway safety agency.

"We are aware, of course, that these accidents in many cases are caused by the failure of maintenance personnel to follow proper safety precautions," she said.

Libya Revamps Its Politics

LONDON (Reuter) — Libya announced sweeping changes in its political life Friday, implementing the ideas of its leader Col. Moammar Khadafy and declaring that the government has ceased to exist.

The Libyan people rule themselves, the official Jamahiriyah News Agency said in a dispatch from Tripoli.

The changes were timed for the second anniversary of an earlier constitutional shake-up, in which Libya was renamed the Libyan Jamahiriyah, which means "the Libyan Masses."

Khadafy, the de facto head-of-state, gave up his post as secretary-general of the General People's Congress on Thursday and will assume no new official title.

The official news agency gave few details of how the country would function under its unique political system.

Italy Crisis Stays

ROME (AP) — Premier-designate Ugo La Malfa failed Friday in his efforts to form a new government, indicating the Communists have decided to return to the opposition because they cannot get cabinet posts.

Failure of the 75-year-old leader of the tiny Republican party in Italy's 31-day political crisis increased prospects of elections two years ahead of schedule.

The decision on whether to tap a new premier-designate or call early elections is up to President Sandro Pertini. He has scheduled a new round of talks with party leaders next week.

La Malfa was tapped a week ago when four-time premier Giulio Andreotti failed to form a new government after losing the support of the Communist party.

La Malfa's designation by Pertini was hailed by leftist parties because they saw a chance to terminate 34 years of Christian Democrat governments in Italy.

2 Weeks in Basement Gnawed Raw by Rats

CHICAGO (AP) — A man's screams and moans went ignored for nearly two weeks before police were called to investigate sounds coming from the basement of a west-side apartment building.

Officers found emaciated, rat-gnawed Dave Holman, 46, on Friday — in a dark, filth-strewn apartment. One of his ankles was bare to the bone.

Holman, described by officers as a derelict with no permanent address and no family, was in serious condition today at Cook County Hospital. He was in danger of losing all his extremities, said the night nursing administrator at Loretto Hospital, where he was taken initially.

Residents who called police Friday night "didn't call us before because they thought we would think they were crazy," said Patrolman Sam Cozzo, who, with his partner Rocco Colucci, found Holman.

Loretto administrator Mary Conway said Holman explained he went to the basement "one night when it was cold."

"He lay down on the floor and went to sleep, and said he was just too weak to get up." He had no food to eat during his ordeal, she said.

She said he was coherent, even "alert and in good spirits" but in danger of a rabies infection, blood poisoning and gangrene, which might cause the amputation of his limbs.

Cozzo said after he and his partner arrived, "we went out on the back porch."

"The backstair landing was full of garbage. The back yard was full of garbage. The garbage hadn't been picked up in a long time and the people had just been throwing it into the yard.

"We went downstairs and pushed the basement door open and heard rats scurrying around.

"We found a male white — very emaciated — he weighed about 90 pounds . . . much of his fingers had been eaten away. Much of the ankle was bare. Eaten right down to the bone."

Medical Pot OK in Wash.

OLYMPIA (AP) — The Senate approved legislation Friday to permit medical use of marijuana in Washington state.

The upper house voted 43 to 2 to permit use of marijuana by cancer patients who have to take chemotherapy or radiation treatment. Medical experts say marijuana eases nausea and other side effects of treatment.

The bill also would allow marijuana to be used by glaucoma patients.

The measure cleared the House earlier, but the Senate added the provision for use by patients undergoing radiation treatment. The House will have to vote on that amendment before the bill can be sent to Gov. Dixy Lee Ray.

Yemens Agree To Truce

ADEN (Reuter) — President Abdul-Fattah Ismail of South Yemen ordered his country's forces today to observe a ceasefire with North Yemen, it was announced.

The ceasefire between the two Yemens, which each accused the other of launching military attacks, was reached after intensive Arab mediation efforts.

In Amman, a North Yemeni diplomat said South Yemeni forces were continuing their bombardment of North Yemeni positions in the border areas.

Charge d'Affaires Ahmed al-Rawdi said he received a cable from his foreign ministry saying North Yemen was observing the ceasefire. But the South Yemenis were still using artillery and tank fire in the border areas.

Carter, Begin Try Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a Sabbath break, President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will try again tonight to find a way out of the stubborn stalemate blocking Mideast peace talks.

Their first two conferences, Thursday and Friday, yielded no sign of a breakthrough. In fact, these sessions created speculation that Begin, who arrived talking tough, might have hardened his position.

"We will certainly make an effort to explore ways, ideas, to bridge the gap," said a White House official.

The two leaders had intended to hold a third meeting Friday afternoon if their initial talks proved promising. Instead, Carter met with State Secretary Cyrus Vance and other advisers to review the impasse.

A source close to the earlier negotiations said: "The situation is serious, even if you have good talks. Things are difficult, but while they are talking things can change." He declined to be identified.

Carter, who ruffled Begin with a statement Tuesday that Israeli-Egyptian differences are "absolutely insignificant," struck much the same theme in remarks videotaped for a Democratic fund-raising dinner Friday night in Los Angeles.

"We now have come within inches of reaching a final agreement," he said. "I'm determined to carry on this effort."

'River of Fire' Forces 20,000 to Flee

EDMONTON (CP) — What started out as a crack in a natural gas pipeline sent sewer workers scrambling away from a "river of fire" Friday night and forced the evacuation of almost 20,000 persons from the city's newest subdivision.

Many residents of the south Edmonton district of Mill Woods found temporary shelter with friends and relatives. With overnight temperatures dipping to the -11° C. mark, about 600 others sought refuge in schools, while an undetermined number stayed in hotels which offered special rates.(See picture on page 2).

Early today explosive propane and butane gases had been flushed out of one sewer and workers were about to flush out another system.

A 22-year-old truck driver caught in the explosion was listed in critical condition this morning in hospital.

As the truck drove past, the gas ignited and flames blew 100 metres into the noon-day sky.

Fifteen minutes after the first explosion and nearly two kilometres away, Nick Hendrey looked up in surprise at a sudden glare lighting the main shaft of a new sewer.

"There was this river of fire at the bottom of the shaft," said Hendrey, a 32-year-old construction foreman. "It was a solid sheet of fire. All of a sudden it went 'whoosh.' It really got bright down there."

Hendrey and his three men scrambled out through a manhole cover they had passed the day before. Twenty-four hours earlier and they would have had nowhere to run.

As it was, one of the men panicked and ran past the escape hatch. "We had to pull him back," said Hendrey. "It was scary."

Two more minor explosions followed.

An analysis of the gas presented more problems. The cracked pipe had carried propane, butane and condensate Friday. The heavier gases were sinking to lower levels, but the condensate was drifting up through the sewers to street level, and there was danger they might drift up into basements and ignite.

Fearing the spread of gas into storm sewers and possibly sanitary sewers, city officials decided by mid-afternoon to evacuate about 3,000 residents in Mill Woods.

By the end of the day, the evacuation spread to an area 28 blocks by 41 blocks.

The main leak occurred in Edmonton's Mill Woods southern subdivision, with a second leak forcing the evacuation of about 1,000 residents five kilometres west in another district.

Pipelines serving local refineries cross the subdivision. As many as 14 run down one utility corridor.

Some residents refused to leave their homes. An official said they could not be forced out unless the Alberta's disaster law was invoked.

Others had not heard about the evacuation. At dusk, their southbound cars choked neighborhood access roads while overhead, black smoke streamed north across the city.

By nightfall Mill Woods was a ghost town. Streets eerily empty, drapes drawn, all lights off, it was as if everyone had gone inside to hide.

Police cruised the area, ensuring everyone who wanted to leave had left. Drivers who didn't have identification and an excuse like having to pick up the family pet were being turned back at checkpoints.

Food Piles Greet Refugees

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For four terrifying days 35-year-old Thich Chau, his delicately attractive wife Ai Lien Huynh, 29, and son Luong, 11, were crammed with 413 other people in a leaky old 38-foot boat as it was battered by storms on the South China Sea.

Conditions aboard were indescribable. By the fourth day, their drinking water had run out and it seemed the waterlogged boat was close to foundering.

They were, by a U.S. Navy ship en route to Hong Kong.

And on Friday the well-dressed, smiling Chaus showed no sign of their ordeal as they eagerly moved their few possessions into comfortable temporary quarters at the rectory of the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church in Saanich.

With one other person, 35-year-old Tai Tran Hon, the family are the first of the South Vietnamese small-boat refugees to arrive in Victoria.

They have been "adopted" by the parish and one of the first things they were shown Friday afternoon was a gigantic quantity of food piled against the wall behind the altar of the church.

Cans, bags and packets of every description — from familiar rice to such unfamiliar items as plum pudding, kippers and homemade blackberry jam — the food with an estimated value of $10,000 has been gathered for the refugees by the church youth group through weekly visits to homes throughout Greater Victoria.

The Chaus and Hon, who had not met until their arrival in Victoria a few days ago, both lived in or near the South Vietnamese capital, Saigon.

Hon was an interpreter attached to the U.S. military from 1965 until his discharge from the South Vietnamese army in 1970, when he ran a grocery shop and jewelry store.

Chau had a small business selling used car parts, while his wife made baskets and other handcrafts.

From the time the U.S. forces pulled out in 1975, they resolved to escape because, as Hon put it simply, "we hated the Communists,"

Speaking to the Times reporter through interpreter Kwong Ming Lam, who came to Canada from Hong Kong 13 years ago, Chau said he was determined to flee Vietnam — despite the knowledge that many refugees had

China Ready To Pull Out Of Vietnam

United Press International

China, its troops in virtual control of the strategic provincial capital of Lang Son, has decided to halt its advance and withdraw, a Japanese report from Peking said today.

The Kyodo News Service said Chinese authorities disclosed the decision to pull out of Vietnam, but that the date for the cease-fire and troop withdrawal has not been set.

Military sources in Tokyo said today Chinese troops captured a hill overlooking Lang Son Friday morning and that Vietnamese forces had abandoned the city, turning it into a "ghost town." They said it was not immediately known if the Chinese would advance further to seize the city.

Sources in Bangkok quoted intelligence reports saying Vietnam has begun an emergency airlift using U.S. built C-130 transports to rush at least one division of regulars totaling from 2,000-9,000 men from south Vietnam to the defence of Hanoi.

The reports said the Chinese have surrounded Lang Son but it was not clear whether troops south of the town overran it or simply bypassed it.

"The Chinese obviously wanted to take Lang Son very badly and the Vietnamese obviously tried very hard to stop them," one Western diplomatic source said. "It looks like a clear victory for the Chinese."

The sources said it was still not clear whether the Chinese had actually occupied the shell-battered town which once had about 40,000 inhabitants.

"There is fighting two miles south of Lang Son on the road to Hanoi," one source said, but added, "We have seen nothing yet that indicates the Chinese are going to push much past that."

Kyodo quoted Chinese authorities as saying the cease-fire and pullout decision was made by the Chinese Communist Party Central Military Commission.

The authorities said there will be a halt of all military operations by Chinese forces deployed inside Vietnam and a withdrawal of all personnel to Chinese territory.

The Vietnamese earlier today said their forces had beaten back a three-day assault on Lang Son by nearly 50,000 Chinese troops and tanks in the major battle of the 15-day-old war. Japanese dispatches from Washington, meanwhile, quoted government and defence department officials as saying Chinese troops had captured Lang Son, about 90 miles north of Hanoi.

Kyodo said, however, that a spokesman for the Vietnamese embassy in Peking denied the reports today that Lang Son had fallen.

Price Agency Vote 'Gimmick'

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with mounting pressure over inflation, the government has created yet another inflation-monitoring agency — the fifth in 10 years.

The new National Commission on Inflation — which will have powers to demand provision of information but will not be able to roll back or defer increases — was quickly labelled a pre-election gimmick by opposition critics.

"The government decided it's got to have some type of body at election time to point to when voters ask what they are doing about inflation," said Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, said in Thunder Bay, Ont., that the commission was "at best, a weak response from an uncommitted government."

The NDP has been pressing the government almost daily over increases in corporate profits and rising prices, particularly food prices which rose more than 14 per cent in the last year.

Earlier this week, Broadbent had proposed creation of a commission that had powers to roll back excessive price increases.

"I don't claim this board is going to wave inflation away," Finance Minister Jean Chretien said in announcing the new agency.

He said the commission will rely on "general persuasion, discussion and arm twisting" to persuade business and labor to restrain wage and price increases.

The new commission replaces the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity (CSIP) which was set up last year as an arm of the Economic Council of Canada as an inflation watchdog.

Firebombing No. 17: Police Nab Suspects

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two young men were taken into police custody early this morning after firebombers threw a Molotov cocktail through the front window of a city bank, the 17th firebombing incident in Greater Vancouver in the past 10 weeks.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch at 14th and Main St. was attacked shortly after midnight when a rock was thrown through the window followed by a bottle — but the wick fell out and there was no damage.

Two men were later picked up after a witness gave police the licence number and description of a vehicle involved. They were not charged, but a vehicle was impounded.

A recent rash of bombings has been directed mainly against banks and government offices in Vancouver. This morning's target had also been attacked early Wednesday, causing some damage and closing it temporarily.

Earlier Friday, a crude incendiary device was thrown through a window of the Gleneagles elementary school, but did little damage. Police blamed it on youths prompted by the publicity given other firebombings.

After the attempted firebombing at Gleneagles school, a police spokesman said a couple of boys were seen running away.

"They broke a window and threw in a glass bottle with a little petroleum in it. It was very amateurish.

Teacher in Fear after Drug Incident

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto area high school teacher says he has lived in fear since he interfered in a drug deal among a group of students.

He said he has been pushed through a plate glass window, hurled down a flight of stairs, had his tires slashed and his family threatened.

The incidents happened more than a year ago, but he said he is so afraid of further attacks that he would talk about his troubles only if he and his school were not identified.

The attacks were not isolated incidents but were symptomatic of growing violence in the schools, he said.

"There's definitely a problem of violence in the schools, and in spite of what the school boards say it's not just happening in North York." North York is a city in Metropolitan Toronto.

A North York board of education report on violence in schools, made public Thursday, said secondary and junior high schools are on the threshhold of increasing violence with 32 reported cases of assault on teachers in three months last year.

The report said school officials must start long-term planning to avoid having to place policemen in the corridors, buy emergency signal systems or to train teachers to join riot squads.

The high school teacher said that after he tried to interfere in the drug deal among the students in his school, he became the target of a string of minor physical assaults and verbal abuse, which finally culminated in his being pushed through a plate glass window.

A student was charged with assault but was given a conditional discharge by the judge.

The teacher said that he found his tires slashed 30 minutes after the student was given the discharge.

And the following week, another student pushed him down the stairs.

Then his wife was told by a telephone caller that the family "would be taken care of."

After that the teacher said he started walking his children to school and using adult babysitters.

But he said he wasn't the only teacher who ran into problems.

"There was a group of teachers being victimized. I know of teachers at other schools who are afraid to walk the halls alone."

He said he still teaches at the school because he's a good teacher, and because he can do more by staying than by running away.

Although he hasn't been attacked in the past year, he said the school staff are more aware of potential trouble and keep a closer eye on things.

"I thought I was the last person it would happen to. I get along very well with the kids.

"There seems to be a certain amount of respectability to violence these days. There's a violent minority who are more brazen because they can get away with it."

Teachers have to be fair but tough, he said.

There wasn't exactly a warm welcome waiting at Silverwood Dairies. Just manager Ivor Fuller with a scowl on his face and no handshake. And on his desk there was a piece of paper with two words written: Calm Down!

He needed the reminder. For since the Times front-page story on soccer player Danny Hood being fired appeared a week ago, the Victoria dairy has been besieged with indignant callers and Fuller has had seven sleepless nights.

"I was shocked and horrified when that story appeared," Fuller said. "And since then it's been total abuse with a rival company using the story, radio stations editorializing yet never calling us, customers cancelling orders and all sorts of crank calls coming in.

"You know, one of the principles of being a Christian is that no matter what someone does to you, you love him," the manager pointed out. "But I'm finding it very difficult to hang onto this principle as far as you're concerned, Mr. Low!"

Frankly, I can live with that, but I do resent the suggestion that I didn't at least try to give "both sides of the story."

When Hood came into the Times to tell how he lost his job after taking a week off (having been refused the time) to train with Canada's Olympic soccer team in California, I immediately phoned Silverwood's plant superintendent Alex Speirs who was, in fact, the one who did the firing.

Speirs did offer to sit down with Hood and me and discuss the problem but all strictly "off the record." All he would say on the record was: "It's an internal problem and that's how we resolved it." There were no suggestions that I talk with Fuller, or anyone else for that matter.

Not until it hit print. Then we were accused of "rushing" with our story, even though Hood was fired two weeks before it appeared.

There were two sides to the story, as there always are, I was told. Danny's was that he asked for time off to try out for and then go to a training camp with our national soccer team. He was refused, went anyway because he didn't want to miss the opportunity of a lifetime, and was fired.

Silverwood's story is that they didn't know where Danny was going and that when he got back they didn't know where he had been.

According to Speirs, Danny merely asked for time off to try out for a soccer team and, as he'd once tried out for a pro club before, they thought that was what he was doing again. The request came at the last minute and, because there was already one man off sick in the four-man ice-cream plant where Danny had worked for two years, it was turned down.

When Danny returned to work a week later, Speirs said he still didn't say where he'd been but merely remarked "Gee, I guess I've had it."

If Silverwoods had known it was an Olympic team before Danny went, then someone would have worked for him, Fuller said. Or if they'd known where he'd been when he got back, he wouldn't have been fired.

Even so, the dairy can't take him back now, Fuller said, because it would only look as though they're admitting they were wrong and were reacting to all the pressure. And that's the sad part.

"Any company would be thrilled to have an employee represent Canada," Fuller said. "Hey, there's nothing but glory in it for us. It's gratuitous advertising. Any company not realizing that would have to be nuts.

"I'm on my last lap," Fuller said "and to have this kind of thing in your retirement year is pretty hard to take. I got my start with Silverwood 47 years ago (when what is now the oldest dairy in B.C. was known as Northwestern Creamery) and that job came through my sports affiliations."

He was a swimmer, he explained, and was representing Canada at the time.

"Over the years, we've developed an image that I think is one of a matchless corporate citizen," Fuller said. "We've sponsored basketball, baseball, curling and bowling teams and individual football players and I believe we were the first company in Victoria ever to sponsor a sports team," the manager said.

"We've had a union to deal with yet we haven't had a day of strike for 40 years, so this kind of suggestion is ridiculous," he added. "It's pretty obvious that any company that behaved like we're accused of behaving wouldn't operate 67 weeks, let alone 67 years!"

Then Ivor Fuller glanced back at his Calm Down sign and reminded me as I left: "You're sure not in the category of a friend at this point."

Fuel Cost Cut 40 Per Cent By Solar Heat

First-season results of a pilot solar-assisted home heating system in Fairfield indicate as much as 40 per cent saving on fuel oil, according to the supplier and statistics from B.C. Hydro and Gulf Oil.

Mrs. A.J. Mitchell said there has been a noticeable drop in fuel consumption, although she has not reviewed her bills in detail.

Ark proprietor Gil Parker said the system has been monitored and shows that 60 per cent of the heat normally supplied to that house by furnace oil is being provided by sunshine.

Water circulated by an electric pump is heated by solar radiation and stored in a basement tank from which it is fed to a radiator in the oil-fired hot air furnace duct. Oil is not consumed unless water temperature drops below the thermostat setting.

At the same time, water in storage preheats the domestic hot water tank, reducing the electrical demand for that system.

Parker said records of electrical consumption in the house had not been segregated to show what porportion went to water heating, but he suggested the saving now could be considerable because there is a pre-heating advantage of 50 degrees F. in winter months and 90 degrees in the summer.

Records of degree-days for the past eight years were consulted for comparison in the season to date. When final records are complete, Parker expects even greater efficiency, even though he said this winter had been colder than normal.

"Of course, none of these figures indicate the true-cost savings," Parker said. "The reduction in fuel oil consumption totally ingores the fact that oil prices rose 16 per cent and electricity jumped 25 per cent last year."

Because of the interest shown in the Mitchell experience, inspection tours are limited to those made by appointment through Ark Solar Products.

Survey Reveals House Prices Up

Victoria house prices have shot upwards since October, a sign the local real estate slump may be over, according to a survey by Royal Trust Co.

The value of a standard three bedroom home in the Victoria area, up to eight years old, was listed at $66,000 in February, up $2,500 or 3.9 per cent from $63,500 in October, the report shows.

In the previous four months, from June, 1978, to October, 1978, the price had not moved at all.

The value of a deluxe four bedroom house in the Victoria area, up to eight years old, was $97,000 in February, up $2,000 or about two per cent from $95,000 in October. During the previous four months, from June to October, the price had edged up by about $1,000 from $94,000.

The prices are average for houses in good areas. The smaller house is 1,200 square feet on a 6,000 square foot lot while the deluxe house is 2,000 square feet on a 7,500 square foot lot.

Victoria Real Estate Board president Bev Highton today said the survey confirms the observation of local realtors that the local housing market appears to have bottomed out and prices are moving up once again.

"Real estate goes in cycles and we have just gone through a slow period lasting almost three years," he said.

"The slump seems to be ending now. There is more optimism everywhere and it appears house prices will move gradually upwards for the balance of the year."

At present levels, Victoria houses are underpriced compared with similar accommodation in other major Canadian cities, he said.

Out of 91 residential areas in Canada, Victoria ranks 27th in terms of its price for the three bedroom home and 25th out of 91 for the four-bedroom home.

Calgary topped both lists and Vancouver was second.

On the Lower Mainland, the $66,000 three-bedroom home would cost $99,500 in Kerrisdale, $84,000 in West Vancouver, $73,000 in Burnaby, $67,000 in Richmond but only $54,000 in Surrey.

The $97,000 four-bedroom deluxe home would cost $160,000 in Kerrisdale, $127,500 in West Vancouver, and $115,000 in Burnaby, but only $90,000 in Richmond and just $70,000 in Surrey.

In Calgary the four-bedroom home would be $176,000 and the three-bedroom one $116,000.

The survey is conducted every four months by Royal Trust to assist its real estate section and also to help companies work out financial arrangments when transferring employees from city to city.

Highton said the price changes reflect a feeling in the local market that real estate values are rising as the Victoria economy improves.

"The tourist industry is helping to create some badly-needed jobs and we have everything else that anyone could want, including a good climate and beautiful surroundings," Highton said.

Saanich Planners To Discuss Industry

A special meeting of Saanich's planning committee may be held within a month to settle the Royal Oak industrial park issue, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Friday.

He said council will have to decide whether to ask for a second public hearing on the issue or to press ahead with an application to have part of the land rezoned for residential use.

Council rejected a proposal for industrial development on the 128 acres of land at Glanford-Vanalman after the first public hearing but voters in a referendum subsequently favored industrial development at the site.

Meanwhile, council has endorsed a request from one of the property owners to have part of the land rezoned for residential use.

However, this would require an amendment of the municipality's community plan.

An application to amend the plan has gone to the Capital Region District but the CRD board has not acted on it, presumably because of the continuing public debate on the merits of industrial development on the land.

Couvelier said the issue would have to be resolved soon.

Group Home Stalled

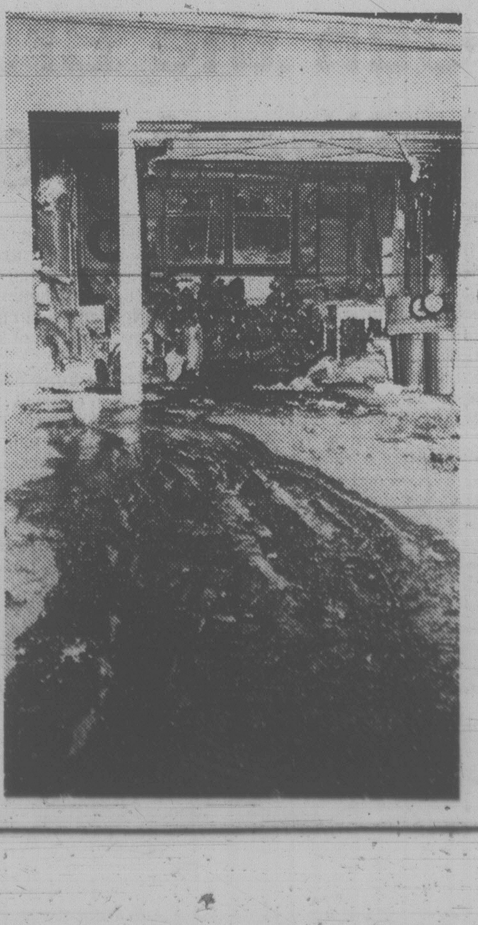
Eight mentally handicapped persons who had hoped to have a group home in operation in the city early this year will now have to wait several more months to make the move, if ever.

City council has told the group's sponsors, the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, the property at 936 Redfern will have to be rezoned to accommodate the group home.

The association has already filed the rezoning application but the procedure, which requires a public hearing, will likely take three to four months to complete.

A number of residents in the area are opposed to the project feeling it would have an adverse effect on their own property values.

Big Bill Looms To Fix Big Drip



Repairs to the leaky Dawson Reservoir near Buchart Gardens will cost about $92,000, the Capital Region District has been told.

Thurber Consultants Ltd. of Victoria, said in a report the repair job would would also mean the temporary evacuation of a house owned by Sandra McCusker at 1205 Benvenuto Avenue.

The report says the leak could be stopped by installing a waterproof lining of plastic or cement on the reservoir walls.

An alternative would be to restrict the level of the water in the reservoir to about 15 feet, the report says.

Tests taken last year showed the reservoir leaks more than 133,000 gallons over a three-week period.

Just Call Charlie 'Maestro'

But for NDP backbencher Charles Barber, 29, taking the podium will gratify a lifelong ambition.

Over the next three months the Victoria MLA and a dozen senior citizens — the core of the Hampton Concert Orchestra — will work together to determine their compatibility.

If things work out, Barber will get the job — unpaid — of leading and rebuilding the 11-year-old orchestra into a performing organization of notice in the community.

Barber is less than half the average age of the Hampton musicians and has never held a position as a conductor although he has long wanted to lead an orchestra and has studied the art.

"I'm really grateful for this opportunity. It falls into a long-time ambition and recent experience," Barber said.

That experience includes casual study of conducting in Vancouver and a course given in California by Warren Jones, assistant conductor of the San Francisco Opera.

Barber has been a musician most of his life.

He plays violin — not terribly well, he admits — and is known as a pianist and sometime composer and arranger who has worked with choral groups and stage bands.

His favorite musicians include Benjamin Britten, Prokofiev, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms and recently he has been working on the conductor's score of Brahms' Second Symphony.

It requires a highly trained ear, familiarity with all instruments of the orchestra, ability to read score at a glance, deal with a specialized language, to maintain rhythyms containing more than one beat simul-

Ultimately, the conductor must be able to bring out a full range of effort by his musicians, or everything will fail, Barber said.

Mel Knudsen, founding conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, directed the Hampton group for more than four years until last year.

For the past six months the orchestra has been without a conductor, held together only by its dedicated members and their trumpet-playing secretary Mrs. Christina Dunton, at 59 the youngster of the orchestra.

She was 13 when she began playing, getting her basic training in brass bands and church orchestras.

George Johnson, 86, is a charter member, playing mellophone since the orchestra was formed with the opening of Hampton hall in 1968. John Gough, flutist, retired school superintendent, has been a member since 1971.

The other instruments include two clarinets, two cellos, violin, viola, euphonium, bassoon and piano.

"You have to perform before critical audiences to develop," he said, convinced he has the makings of a first class amateur orchestra.

Ideally, it will grow to perhaps 50 members, strengthened by more strings and woodwinds and Barber sees the possibility of adding young musicians.

There are few concert opportunities today for youngsters since the demise of the Greater Victoria Schools Orchestra, but the Hampton Orchestra should permit the accomplished older musicians to pass along their skills.

For himself, Barber figures conducting is the most rigorous exercise he has come across: "It's the best thing I've done for a year. Music is really the best thing, the world's most honest language — especially compared with politics."
